

Career reboot 'may bring some answers'

Bereaved dad of man found dead in Barrymore's pool still hunting truth

By William Mata

william.mata@hertsessexnews.co.uk

THE father of Stuart Lubbock, the man found dead in Michael Barrymore's swimming pool in 2001, said the former TV star's bid to make a small-screen comeback could be a landmark moment in the investigation into his son's death.

Last month, which marked 16 years since his son's death, Terry Lubbock found out the ex-Strike It Lucky host was making a sitcom.

Father-of-one Stuart Lubbock, 31, was found dead in the swimming pool of Mr Barrymore's mansion in Roydon, with injuries indicating he had been sexually assaulted.

Nobody has ever been charged but Mr Barrymore and two other men were arrested and held for questioning in 2007 before being released.

Revive

The entertainer, who has struggled to revive his career, announced in December he was hoping to sue Essex Police after the force admitted he was wrongfully arrested. A court battle will start in May.

In light of this Terry Lubbock, 72, who now lives in a Harlow care home, said: "I can't understand why he is doing this now, it is very bad timing."

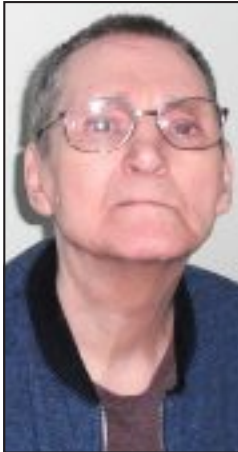

"I had no feelings at all when I heard."

"There are two sides to it. I was happy that he is making an appearance because it will open everything up."

"I'm sure that Barrymore thinks this is the end of a long struggle. He thinks he can put the lid on this by being on TV. But I want to keep it going."

Terry said Barrymore's potential return to TV could be a good thing or a bad thing.

"It all depends what reception he gets. I would like it to go down like a sunken ship," he added.

"This could be a watershed and it could go two ways."

"I think if the public get behind him it will be very successful. I saw him (perform) a long time ago and he was very good, he will be giving it his best shot. I will be watching it."

Mr Lubbock has fought for answers for years and remains frustrated that nobody has been brought to justice. Essex Police has confirmed a murder investigation is still open.

Mr Lubbock said: "There are a lot of questions I would like to ask him, I would like to have a meeting with him."

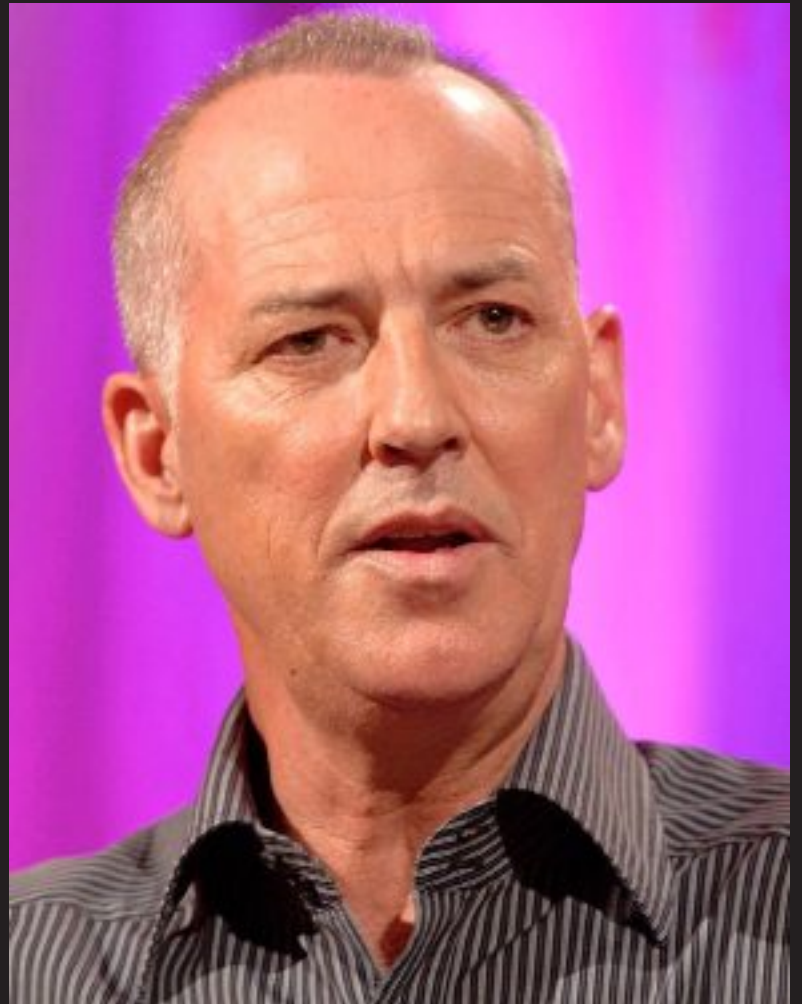

"(Before the death) I was living at home and I had paid for my house, everything was rosy and I was looking forward to retiring. And then that happened to my son."

"The question mark has got bigger and bigger."

He continued: "The fact is now my son suffered injuries, Barrymore and two other guys were arrested on suspicion of rape, serious sexual assault and murder."

"That was only on suspicion. The police have let me down big time, I think they have a lot of

IN NEED OF SUPPORT: Agnes Wilczak and her daughter Mary

Mum's agony at mystery condition of daughter, 5

Online campaign to raise £10,000 in aid of schoolgirl Mary

By William Mata

william.mata@hertsessexnews.co.uk

A HARLOW mother is desperately appealing to help her daughter whose mystery condition has detained them in a life of misery.

Single mum Agnes Wilczak, who has epilepsy, said her only child Mary, five, has symptoms matching autism and needs lifeline therapy to improve her communication.

But the family's circumstances has led them to miss out on more support from health services, leading them to start an online campaign to raise £10,000.

Ms Wilczak, 29, of Mill Court, Harlow, said: "I feel so unable. It is humiliating to ask for help but there really is no help at the moment. It is day by day surviving.

"My daughter can barely say a word, she cannot make eye contact, she is really unsettled and is getting more demanding as she gets older."

To make things worse Mary has developed painful bowel problems.

Ms Wilczak said: "She is in pain from morning until evening. In the last six months she has become more and more aggressive. She broke the oven.

"Now Mary is five she can see a paediatrician. She has a speech and learning disorder, they did not want to rush with a condition name. For me it is autism.

"It is exhausting because I am stuck in the system. We have been referred six times for the social services by different authorities.

Diagnosis

"Children's societies cannot support us because the case is too severe. The social services don't want to deal with us. They say Mary does not have a diagnosis.

"They put a general condition on her, so she can get disability living allowance, but they are not officially going to diagnose her for another four or five years.

"They say that they don't want to label the child, but this is not a matter of labelling.

"They say for a year and a half she doesn't have enough boxes to tick for the autistic spectrum.

"Because of this their hands are tied. It seems like not having a diagnosis leaves us to really struggle in the system."

Ms Wilczak wants her daughter to continue receiving autistic treatment even though she has not been formally diagnosed.

She added: "She is such a beautiful girl and when you look at her you cannot see she has any sort of disability but when you start watching her you see what is really going on.

"The one thing we agree (with health services) is that her speech development is at the age of 22 months."

Ms Wilczak is a former orthodontic nurse. She noticed something was wrong when Mary was eight months old.

The baby did not respond to her mother and raged like a newborn even when she was as old as two.

She said: "When Mary was two I still had some savings and we went through seven ABA (applied behaviour analysis) sessions.

"Through this she improved massively and started communicating with me."

As her epilepsy got worse Ms Wilczak lost her job, leaving her unable to fund the private sessions which cost £700 for 15 hours.

Mary is too advanced for a special school but is struggling to keep pace with her peers and make friends in her regular primary school.

Through a three-month fundraising drive, Ms Wilczak aims to raise enough for further treatment which can be completed to give her a shot at leading a normal life.

Struggling

Ms Wilczak said: "I can see she is really struggling because she wants to be with children but she doesn't know how, and I can't help her with this.

"My mum came to see me, but the rest of the family cannot because it is too expensive.

"In the condition we are in now it is heart breaking because we are isolated enough without being able to see your family."

questions to answer.

"I would like to know what is going to happen to those two other men who were arrested with Barrymore. It has dragged on for ten years.

"I am very upset with the police. I do not think they have done a good job on the day my son was killed and that set the scene for the whole thing. They have not closed it, so what are they doing?"

The title and network of Mr Barrymore's new show has not been confirmed but it will co-star Game of Thrones actor Tom Brooke and be produced by Antenna Pictures.

After Essex Police admitted wrongful arrest last autumn, the 64-year-old entertainer tweeted a fan that the result meant "justice".

Mr Lubbock said: "A lot of people have said I have got to move on. I have moved on but my head has not moved on and 16 years of my life has been dedicated to finding the truth and it will go on.

"As long as there is interest and people want to know what is going on I will play my part."

TRIBUTE: Sarah Donaghey is running in Kyle's memory

Sarah goes on marathon run to repay staff who cared for tragic brother

She is raising funds for children's ward

By William Mata

william.mata@hertsexnews.co.uk

A HARLOW woman is preparing to run this weekend's Brighton Marathon in memory of her younger brother, who died aged 16 months.

Sarah Donaghey, 25, of Staple Tye, is raising funds for the Dolphin Ward of Princess Alexandra Hospital by entering her first 26.2-mile run on Sunday.

She wants to support the children's ward of the infirmary in Hamstel Road, Harlow, in tribute to sibling Kyle Cook, who died in 2006 after spending five months there.

Miss Donaghey, who works for bookmaker William Hill, said: "I have always enjoyed challenging myself and I have never run before in my life.

Eye-opener

"If I can do this it shows that people can do other things. Training has been interesting, it has been an eye-opener but I have finished a half-marathon.

"It is going to be a big adventure and I am doing it in memory of my younger brother Kyle."

Kyle was born in August 2004, alongside twin brother Rhys Cook, but he suffered with epilepsy, development delay and bronchial pneumonia.

In his short life he spent a long time receiving care on the ward

MISSION: Sarah Donaghey has raised £700 so far and Miss Donaghey said she is running to thank PAH staff for their efforts.

She said: "We have made some friends for life with the staff members that cared for Kyle.

"All the staff went above and beyond to make all of us as comfortable as possible with the time we spent at the ward.

"I want to use this opportunity to be able to give back to the ward, as a thank you for everything they did for my family."

Miss Donaghey has already smashed her £500 fundraising target with her JustGiving page total standing at nearly £700 at the time of writing.

Reality

She added: "This last week it is becoming a reality.

"It is going to be tough, but I know I am doing it for Kyle."

Pair of 19-year-olds are set to go on trial charged with attempted murder

Police stop motorist in smashed-in car on M11

AN accident caused heavy delays on the M11 approaching Harlow on Monday.

Congestion built at junction 7, approaching the Hastingwood roundabout.

Highways England reported the incident around 3.45pm and data showed the traffic was particularly bad near the McDonald's restaurant.

The junction also connects to the A14 through-road, which leads to Hertford and Chelmsford in either direction.

Delays were also reported on the A12 and A112, approaching Brentwood, due to a police incident.

Crash

Meanwhile a man was caught driving a car with a smashed-in front on the M11 near Harlow after an earlier crash.

Essex Police constable Mike Bignell spotted the driver at 5.40pm on Tuesday evening between junctions 6 (Epping) and 7 (Harlow).

He revealed that his reaction to seeing the badly damaged car was: "Are you kidding me?"

After he pulled the vehicle over, the driver said he had been involved in a crash and was trying to get home to Epping.

The vehicle was prohibited from moving and the driver was reported for using a vehicle in a dangerous condition.

Bad parking makes woman 'prisoner in her own home'

Gran can't get mobility scooter down kerb to meet pals for coffee

By William Mata

william.mata@hertsessexnews.co.uk

A DISABLED Harlow woman said motorists parking in front of her drive have left her housebound.

Jeanette Wilson, 74, of Penlow Road, has had her leg amputated and suffers spinal spondylosis but still loves catching up with friends over a coffee at Staple Tye McDonald's.

Kerb

She is able to drive short distances on her electric wheelchair but the only path is all too often blocked by drivers who park on top of a dropped kerb.

As the £7,000 mobility aid cannot handle the bumpy ride over the kerb, Mrs Wilson said she is trapped and fears losing her independence.

She said: "They cannot find space to park so they park on the dropped kerbs.

"We put notes on the window but they just ignore it.

"I can't get out and I have to come back indoors. I like to get out even though I only have one leg.

"I have lovely friends who I meet.

"The other side of the road is rickety too. It is worse than potholes."

Mrs Wilson is well known in the Abbotswood area of Harlow and affectionately known as Mrs Latte after her love for a milky coffee from McDonald's.

Last weekend she cut the ribbon to officially reopen the refurbished Staple Tye branch.

Mrs Wilson has three children with husband John and five grandchildren.

As one granddaughter has heart trouble and Down's syndrome, the elderly couple are often called on for babysitting duty, but this is made harder by the parking situation.

Prisoners

John Wilson, 80, said: "Idiots park there 99 per cent of the time and she cannot get out.

"We are prisoners in our own home and I have lived here since 1971."

He added that he has difficulty communicating with drivers as there is often a language barrier.

A TEENAGE boy was injured outside Burnt Mill Academy in Harlow after falling off his bike.

The East of England Ambulance Trust (Eeast) sent units to the First Avenue school shortly before 8am last Wednesday March 29.

A spokeswoman from Eeast said the boy was taken to Princess Alexandra Hospital in Hamstel Road.

She said: "We had an ambulance on the scene within five minutes after reports a boy had a fractured ankle. It was a young teenager. He came off his bike. He was taken to hospital."

Eeast has no record of a vehicle being involved in the accident.

CONCERNS: Councillor Tony Durcan says the venture at Pets' Corner can't be totally discounted

Wags to riches dream for council grooming parlour

Working party unleashes idea to boost funds at park Pets' Corner

By William Mata

william.mata@hertsexnews.co.uk

A COUNCIL-RUN grooming parlour in Harlow could accept pets from the public in a bid to boost its coffers.

Harlow Council subsidises the popular Harlow Town Park small animal farm Pets' Corner which currently only grooms its own animals.

But a council working group is toying with the idea of running a business there for the public to bring their pets too.

Opposition Councillor Simon Carter said in a cabinet meeting on Thursday March 23: "I was on the working group and one of the things we looked at is making more use of the dog grooming parlour."

"As people wish to use such a facility, I wonder if there is any progress on it."

Pledge

Harlow Council has just pledged £195,000 in 2017/18 and £198,500 in 2018/19 to support it.

The working group of the council is exploring options of how to make the farm more profitable so such subsidies can be reduced.

Councillor Tony Durcan was concerned about having a private business as part of a council project.

The portfolio holder for

PARLOUR: Harlow Council is exploring the idea of opening the Pets' Corner grooming parlour in the Town Park to the public regeneration and enterprise said: "We have not completely discounted the idea but it does go fundamentally against the principles of what Pets' Corner is."

"That unit was set up as part of the regulations to make sure the grooming was done for the animals we have responsibility for. Whilst it is a good idea as a small business, what we have to ensure is that we maintain and meet with the regulations to make sure the facility is used for its purpose."

"There is a wider debate about the appropriateness of what could be viewed as a private industry working from a public environment."

He added: "It's not a definite no, but there are some fundamental questions that need to be answered."

Concerns

"If it is going to be dog grooming, would we have to go through a tendering process and offer that space for anybody?"

"Just because we have got someone who works for us who happens to be able to cut dogs may not be appropriate."

Thieves target new rugby club site

HARLOW Rugby Club's new complex has reportedly been targeted in a burglary on Saturday (April 1).

The upgraded facility in Second Avenue, Harlow, is currently being constructed while the Rams continue to play in their Ram Gorse home.

A message on Facebook group Spotted in Harlow said thousands of pounds worth of tools were taken during the break-in.

Neither the club, nor Essex Police has been able to provide more details.

The Facebook post has been seen hundreds of times.

It reads: "The site boxes were broken into, thousands of pounds worth of tools were taken.

"This is people's livelihoods, these men have children to support and mortgages to pay. They now can't work."

The writer of the post added that nail guns, saws and batteries were among the items taken.

The club has been approached for a comment.

Schoolgirl, 11, praised after she organises fundraiser for charity

Amber is the driving force behind special event in aid of group that helps dogs

By William Mata

william.mata@hertsessexnews.co.uk

AN 11-year-old girl has raised more than £1,500 for charity with an event that cost just a fraction of that sum to organise.

Mark Hall Academy student Amber Growden raised £1,550 for canine charity Protecting Pre Loved Border Collies (PPBC) from a fundraising ramble which cost just £10 to stage.

Walkers gathered at Parndon Mill Gallery, off Elizabeth Way, Harlow, and walked alongside the River Stort and through trees and fields to the town's north.

Amazing

Amber, who lives in Ryecroft, Harlow, said: "I loved it. The day was amazing and lots of people turned up to support me and sponsored me online. It was great.

"Organising the walk was fun but also hard work. I made posters, created a Facebook page and collected sponsorship money. But it all paid off and I would love to do more fundraising for PPBC."

In addition to sponsorship raised by walkers, further funds were generated through a raffle held at the gallery. PPBC also had a stall where donations could be made.

The video was filmed and produced by Amber's older cousin Leanne West, who works in mar-

She undertook the charity event as part of the Tenner Chal-

The school in First Avenue, Harlow challenged students to raise as much money for charity as they could from a £10 donation.

Pleased

Lynn Gaspar, senior administrator for PPBC, said: "Protecting Preloved Border Collies is exceptionally pleased and proud of the phenomenal effort made by Amber.

"Considering Amber's age I cannot praise her professionalism more, her event was tremendously well-organised and successful."

Maternity training is handed a £50k boost

MORE than £50,000 has been invested in maternity training at Princess Alexandra Hospital.

The funding is a boost for the infirmary in Hamstel Road, Harlow, which is currently in special measures after the Care Quality Commission rated it 'inadequate' in a report last year.

Maternity and gynaecology was a highlight in the eyes of the inspectors who rated the department 'outstanding' – the only area of inspection to achieve the distinction.

Nancy Fontaine, chief nurse, said she welcomed a £50,333 grant from Health Education England's maternity safety training fund programme.

She said: "We welcome this funding, which will help to further improve our trust's outstanding maternity department."

The money will allow more than 100 staff to take part in courses including resilience training, childbirth emergencies in the community and a labour ward leaders' course.

Hospital staff 'work extra unpaid hours and when ill'

Annual survey finds one in 13 are putting in 11 hours over a week

By Sam Meadows

sam.meadows@hertsexnews.co.uk

STAFF at Princess Alexandra Hospital in Harlow work extra hours unpaid and feel under pressure to come in when ill, according to a staff survey.

One in 13 members of staff at the Harlow hospital are working 11 hours unpaid every week – one of the highest rates in England – according to the results of the annual NHS Staff Survey.

Staff at the trust were among the most likely in England to report feeling under pressure from managers to work when unwell, with 32.3 per cent of those who had come into work despite not feeling well enough to do their job saying they felt pressured.

At Colchester Hospital, 58.5 per cent of staff said they had worked while unwell in the past three months, with 32.4 per cent of those saying they had felt pressure from managers.

Across England, three-fifths of staff at NHS hospitals are working additional unpaid hours, with 43.7 per cent saying they do up to five hours on top of their contracted hours each week, 9.6 per cent saying they work an extra six to ten hours a week and four per cent saying they work 11 or more extra unpaid hours a week.

Acute

The situation has improved slightly from 2015, when 41.2 per cent of staff at acute trusts said they worked no extra hours unpaid, in 2016 it was 42.7 per cent, but it's much worse than in 2010, when nearly half of staff worked no extra unpaid hours (47.5 per cent).

Since 2010, the proportion working 11 or more unpaid hours a week has risen from 3.3 per cent to four per cent, with the proportion working six to ten hours up from 8.7 per cent to 9.6 per cent.

General managers were the most likely to be working extra unpaid hours, with 86.9 per cent doing so, followed by consultants, 85.5 per cent, and midwives, 84.9 per cent.

A fifth of general managers (21.6 per cent) said they are putting in 11 or more unpaid hours a week on top of their contracted hours, with one in nine consultants (10.8 per cent) doing the same.

Three-quarters of ambulance control staff (75.3 per cent) said they had come to work when they weren't well enough to do their job, as had two thirds of nursing and healthcare assistants (66.8 per cent) and midwives (66.2 per cent).

More than half of ambulance technicians who said they had worked when they were unwell said they had felt pressure from managers to do so, 56.8 per cent, with 62.5 per cent of the group reporting having worked while unwell in the past three months.

Discarded cigarette causes fire

A HARLOW flat caught fire on Tuesday after a cigarette was dropped.

Essex County Fire and Rescue Service were called to the blaze in Glebelands shortly before 6pm last Tuesday.

When firefighters arrived they found the fire was on the balcony outside the front door of the first floor flat. They managed to extinguish the fire by 6.30pm.

A spokesman from ECRFS said: "The door suffered extensive damage but luckily the fire was put out before it spread to the flat."

Airline's spreading its wings and checking in at Stansted

Operator Jet2 is celebrating its flying start with first flights bound for Alicante

By Martin Ford

martin.ford@hertsessexnews.co.uk

THERE were celebrations and brand new aircraft departing from London Stansted Airport as a new airline and package holiday specialist celebrated the departure of its first flights.

Emblazoned with the livery of Jet2, the first flights took off from Stansted bound for Alicante last Thursday, March 30, with passengers receiving free gifts.

The earliest customers to check-in - Lynne Avers from Dagenham, Sylvia Honeywell from Chigwell, Pauline Barnard from Milton Keynes and Carla Poulton from Chigwell - were given a free holiday.

First base

Stansted is Jet2's first base in the south of England, with routes to 27 destinations including Spain, the Greek islands, the Canaries, Madeira and Crete. Flights will also operate to Dubrovnik and Geneva during the winter.

The investment into the operation has created more than 250 jobs in flight and cabin crew, engineering and ground operations roles.

Steve Heapy, CEO, said: "We have got off to a flying start in every sense at London Stansted Airport. Our formula is proven, having driven phenomenal loyalty and growth in northern England, Scotland and Northern Ireland and we are very excited to be bringing this to our new customers across the East of England and in London."

Andrew Cowan, Stansted Airport's CEO, said: "We're absolutely delighted to welcome the first Jet2.com passengers to London Stansted as they jet off on the airline's first ever flights from the airport on brand-new aircraft."

"This is the start of what we believe will be a very successful partnership, providing people from across London and the east of England with a fantastic range of great value, quality holidays and a wide choice of flight-only options to many European hotspots from their local airport."

REVIEW

VARIETY: The Fisherman's Platter

Restaurant is worth visiting

By Alan Woods, editor observer@hertsexesnews.co.uk

TUCKED away in sleepy Stansted Mountfitchett is Linden House, a Victorian building that is home to The Vine restaurant. Linden House itself offers nine boutique-style bedrooms, whilst the restaurant downstairs has capacity for up to 50 diners. I headed along on a Tuesday evening to try The Vine out.

Layout

The Vine restaurant oozes with 17th century style. There are two entrances, one from the main road via a splendid Victorian front door and a second from the back, which passes an equally impressive waterfall feature.

The restaurant is cosy and appropriately lit for evening dinner, with candles on each of the tables and a friendly and relaxing atmosphere. Abstract artwork lines the walls. It was a cool, spring night when we visited but there is so much potential for The Vine in the summer.

With two separate outdoor terraces, it would be a lovely spot for a pint after work in the summer months.

The drink

All too often nowadays, a drinks menu in a restaurant is too limited – but this was one absolute standout point for this place.

Perhaps most impressive was The Vine's gin menu, as it boasts 25 different offerings from London Dry options to more exotic spiced and fruit flavours.

They're reasonably priced too, with the cost varying from £2.10 to £3.90.

STYLISH: The Vine restaurant

My friend gushed over the wine menu too, as the variety of both red and white wine was endless. There is something here to suit almost every course listed on the main menu.

The food

We loved the line that was inserted at the top of the menu – 'all our food is cooked as fast as we can but it's not fast food.' So what did we go for?

Starters:

After being served a deliciously warm bread roll (what is better than a warm, fresh bread roll?) we shared the Fisherman's Platter (£13.50) that included smoked salmon, a crab and crayfish cocktail and squid and it was served with rustic bread and tartar sauce.

This offered superb variety and was impeccably presented. We both enjoyed the selection on offer here and it was a great way to kick the night off. Had we not gone for the shared dish there were a further seven options on offer, varying from Deep Fried Shredded Chill beef (£5.90) to Battered Scallops (£7.90).

Mains:

I opted for the more traditional Ham and Leek Pie (£13.50) whilst my friend chose the Chickpea, Sweet Potato and Spinach Curry (£11.50). Without a doubt one of the best selling points this restaurant has is that it offers this curry as a Vegan option.

My friend is Pescatarian so was delighted when she found this available. The curry was served with coconut, spices and garlic and was finished with fenugreek. The pie was wonderfully filling and was served with leek mash and honey roasted carrots.

The mash was delicious and the pie full of taste. The mains menu is filled with options to suit any taste. I was equally as tempted by the Textures of Pork (£15.50), which was a tenderloin of pork, Cumberland sausage and ham hock bon bon, again served with mash.

Service:

This was impeccable. It wasn't the busiest night at the restaurant but the waitress and front of house manager were so attentive throughout the evening. There was never a moment when our needs were not catered for and we were regularly asked if we wanted more drinks, the next course and then coffee to round the night off.

Overall:

I cannot fault The Vine. Everything about it was superb. The great thing is that when I return, I know there is a selection of equally delicious options on the menu that will make the next meal entirely different – but equally as good – as the first.

And it's not only the variety of food that will entice me back but the brilliant selection of drinks too. This really is a restaurant that's worth the drive to from Chelmsford.

You'll be blown away by not only the offering but also the service and the ambience.

VEGAN OPTION: Chickpea, sweet potato and spinach curry

FILLING: The ham and leek pie

Boss film is Balwin's baby

A VIRTUOSO vocal performance from Alec Baldwin as a tyrannical infant, who wears a black business suit, carries a briefcase and pulls the wool over the eyes of his sleep-deprived adult handlers, almost carries Tom McGrath's colourful computer-animated fantasy to full term.

It's a neat conception though not a smooth delivery and Michael McCullers' screenplay, loosely based on the award-winning picture book by Marla Frazee, has pregnant pauses where plot and gags should be.

Boss Baby suckles on its neat premise, feeding Baldwin infrequent zinging dialogue like when his pint-sized corporate lackey swats away taunts about having to wear a nappy: "You know who else wears diapers? Astronauts and NASCAR drivers!"

Seth MacFarlane has been traversing this rich comic territory with greater acuity since 1999 in his animated TV series, Family Guy, through the character of megalomaniacal toddler genius, Stewie Griffin.

Evidently, there are only so many genuine laughs to go round before McGrath's hare-brained caper has to resort to toilet humour and shameless emotional manipulation to pad out the 97 minutes.

Every night, seven-year-old Tim Templeton (voiced by Miles Christopher Bakshi) enjoys three bedtime stories, five hugs and a special song from his parents Ted (Jimmy Kimmel) and Janice (Lisa Kudrow), who make time for their boy despite demanding jobs for Puppy Co.

This bond is severely tested with the arrival of a brother called Boss Baby (Baldwin), who conceals his status as a fast-rising executive at BabyCorp until Tim catches the new arrival talking business on a toy 'phone.

"If people knew where babies really came from, they'd never have one. A bit like hot dogs," Boss Baby tersely informs his sibling. It transpires that Boss Baby is on a secret mission to stop Puppy Co's CEO, Francis E Francis (Steve Buscemi), from launching a new product that could weaken humankind's enduring love for babies.

"If this new puppy is as cute as we think, it could put the baby business out of business, baby!" warns the smartly suited infant with an overinflated sense of self-importance.

Tim initially rages against Boss Baby, but he soon realises that helping his nemesis to complete the mission, thereby earning promotion, would be the quickest route to ridding the family home of a second child.

The Boss Baby ties itself in knots blurring fantasy and reality.

Baldwin's bone dry delivery is a masterclass in split-second comic timing and he repeatedly elevates the hit-or-miss material in McCullers' script. "There's not enough love to go round," laments Boss Baby at one point.

My affection doesn't quite stretch to McGrath's picture.

The Passion play

BORN and raised in Amherst, Massachusetts, where she spent most of her adulthood and died at the age of 55 in 1886 from Bright's disease, poet Emily Dickinson evaded the grubby fingers of fame in her reclusive lifetime.

A heavily edited first collection of her poetry emerged four years after her death and it was a further 65 years before her complete works were published, solidifying her status as one of the most important American writers of the 19th century.

Liverpudlian writer-director Terence Davies clearly feels a deep affinity with Dickinson and his labour of love, A Quiet Passion, paints a richly detailed portrait of a misunderstood woman.

His script appropriates some of Emily's own words, but is a subjective fictional account that captures both his subject's solemnity and her caustic wit, like her throwaway barb about hypocrisy – "In America, we cherish it" – or her withering assessment of her chances of finding a husband: "I am a kangaroo amongst the beauties. Let us hope the man who courts me will have an interest in zoology."

The film follows young Emily (Emma Bell) from her time at Mount Holyoke Female

A QUIET PASSION (15)

Seminary to her later years (now played by Cynthia Nixon), when she writes her poetry late at night with the blessing of her pious father, Edward (Keith Carradine).

In early scenes, Emily's reluctance to slavishly follow teachings – her soul is her own, not God's – prickles her educators.

"You are alone in your rebellion," warns a teacher.

She returns home less than a year into her studies and repeatedly clashes with her father, a prominent politician, who stridently imposes his will on his children.

He does agree, however, that Emily can write verse behind closed doors in the dead of night and she is published anonymously in the Springfield Republican.

Supported by her doting sister Vinnie (Jennifer Ehle) and frequently visited by their friend Vryling Buffam (Catherine Bailey), Emily settles into an almost hermetic existence at the family home, where she observes the minutiae of society life and passes judgement on the work of the Brontës.

"If they wanted to be wholesome, I imagine they would crochet," quips Emily.

While her brother Austin (Duncan Duff) embarks on an adulterous affair with Mabel Todd (Noemie Schellens), Emily remains alone and aloof, untouched by Cupid's arrow.

A Quiet Passion is a dense and exceedingly wordy tribute to a trailblazer at odds with the prevailing moods of the era.

Nixon's mannered, yet emotionally layered performance is among her best work, embracing all of her subject's foibles and flaws as she pours herself onto the page.

Ehle brings warmth and boundless optimism to her sibling, who appreciates the goodness and compassion in Emily even when the writer cannot see it herself.

EASTER

Kick start spring at Gunpowder Mills

SPRING is in full bloom at The Royal Gunpowder Mills, Waltham Abbey as the 2017 season of events continues with Spring into Easter.

There's eggcellent science and creative fun when this fascinating attraction located in Beaulieu Drive opens its doors daily until April 17 from 10am till 5pm. Last ticket entry is at 3pm.

Spring into Easter promises great science in The Mad Lab where there are opportunities to take home and experiment with "Fried Goopy Eggs", test the science behind bouncy eggs and look into how non-Newtonian fluid works.

Madness ensues as there's daily science shows with Professor Nitrate in The Mad Lab with all types of bangs, crashes and experiments to be seen; audience participation is a must.

Children are encouraged to expand their creativity with opportunities to make Easter cards, design chalkboard eggs, have a go at crafting their own fashionable bunny ears, design t-shirts, make puppets and write their very own puppet show.

There will also be the chance to make rockets which can be launched and then taken home. Children can also try using the tennis ball cannon, a crazy contraption designed to launch and propel tennis balls at high speed.

The Easter Bank Holiday weekend promises an array of fun including an outside science show (weather dependent) where Professor Nitrate tests some brand new theories.

There's also the Easter Bunny on hand to help during the Easter egg hunt and on Easter Sunday and Monday there's some of the cutest animals in town with the pygmy goats and ducklings on hand in the indoor petting zone.

Events and marketing coordinator Luke Dunne said: "There's fun for all the family at this Easter event."

"Children and adults can enjoy the great variety of activities we have on offer, there's 170 acres of beautiful parkland and ample opportunity to explore it with the land train tour."

As well as the Easter activities on offer, there's the award winning exhibition itself, a film which explores the history of the Royal Gunpowder Mills, an armoury, a 1940s exhibition and wildlife tower and walk. EASTER EVENTS

Make fluffy friends at Barleylands

IT'S the surest sign that spring has sprung (and the cutest) when you see newborn lambs skipping in a field.

There's something so adorable about the fluffy little creatures hopping about and it signals the start of a new season and new life.

Lambs are usually born in early spring and March and April is often the best month to see them in.

Farmers like to calculate it so that most of their lambs are born in the spring as the mothers need lots of fresh grass to eat so they can make enough milk to feed their offspring.

While you can see lambs in farmers' fields around the county, there are some places in Essex where you can get up close and personal with the woolly babies.

At Barleylands in Billericay, visitors can see lambing live in action and even bottle-feed the baby lambs.

You can also meet the Easter Bunny, take part in the Easter egg hunt, explore the huge hen house and meet all the other baby animals.

■ When: April 10 to 14, and April 16 and 17. (Special Easter activities will not run on April 8, 9, 15). Cost: Adults £10.80, children £9.90, family £37.80.

HarlowStar GRAND NATIONAL SWEEPSTAKE KIT

 1 THE LAST SAMURI 14/1 Came second last year and, despite having to carry nearly top weight this time, there's no reason why he can't go close again.	 2 MORE OF THAT 12/1 Trainer Jonjo O'Neill loves this horse, but his career has been hit with setbacks. His last two runs have been more encouraging, though.	 3 SHANTOU FLYER 50/1 A faller in last year's four-miler at Cheltenham when still going well, though he does have stamina to prove.	 4 PERFECT CANDIDATE 33/1 Guaranteed to stay the trip. Whether he has the class required these days, or the speed, is another matter.
 5 SAPHIR DU RHEU 20/1 A confidence-boosting win at Kelso was followed by a storming run in the Gold Cup, which puts him right in the frame.	 6 ROI DES FRANCS 40/1 Only won one of his six runs for his new trainer, but that was on his most recent outing. Doesn't look very well handicapped.	 7 WOUNDED WARRIOR 50/1 Stamina unlikely to be an issue but he needs plenty of cut in the ground to be seen to best effect and was pulled up last time out.	 8 WONDERFUL CHARM 33/1 Went into the Foxhunter at Cheltenham with doubts about his stamina but he stayed on strongly to be beaten by Pacha Du Polder.
 9 TENOR NIVERNAIS 25/1 Likely to give his supporters a run for their money before stamina becomes an issue on the second circuit.	 10 BLAKLION 14/1 Jumps well and should stay the distance. Comes from dual Grand National-winning stable of Nigel Twiston-Davies.	 11 DROP OUT JOE 66/1 Needs a sound surface to be seen at his best and has not run since winning in June due to a setback. A good jumper.	 12 LE MERCUREY 33/1 Looked to have reached a new level when he chased home Native River at Newbury, but beaten a long way at Kelso last time.
 13 THE YOUNG MASTER 20/1 Won the bet365 Gold Cup last season, so hopes are that stamina will not catch him out. Not discounted easily.	 14 CAUSE OF CAUSES 12/1 Finished eighth in the 2015 Grand National but missed the cut last year. Bounced back to form recently and is a strong stayer.	 15 REGAL ENCORE 50/1 Questions to answer over his jumping and has pulled up in three of his last four races. Not the ideal type.	 16 VIEUX LION ROUGE 10/1 A favourite. Sixth last year when just a seven-year-old, he jumps well and is a strong contender for this year.
 17 DEFINITELY RED 11/1 Impressive at Wetherby and Doncaster, but jumping called into question in the past which could be his Achilles heel. Still a player.	 18 UCCELLO CONTI 20/1 Ran a good race 12 months ago without ever looking like winning. A better surface might help, but hard to see victory here.	 19 DOUBLE SHUFFLE 40/1 Whether he stays the distance remains to be seen, but he has the class to be involved if he takes to the fences and stays.	 20 HOUBLON DES OBEAUX 33/1 A light of his former self, rated some 20lb lower than at his peak. Trainer Venetia Williams won with similar type Mon Mome in 2009.
 21 PLEASANT COMPANY 16/1 Given a brilliant ride to win the Bobbyjo Chase at Fairyhouse, which tends to be the best National trial.	 22 ONE FOR ARTHUR 14/1 Proved his stamina when winning the Classic Chase at Warwick. Looks sure to run a big race.	 23 BALLYNAGOUR 66/1 Out of form, but he was travelling ominously well before he unseated his rider 12 months ago. Could surprise at a huge price.	 24 O'FAOLAINS BOY 40/1 Injury curtailed a promising career, but could surprise if he returns to the form which saw him run well in the Gold Cup last year.
 25 HIGHLAND LODGE 25/1 The 11-year-old has a liking for Aintree and is a fine jumper. Lowish weight and should stay the distance. Chances of placing at least.	 26 BISHOPS ROAD 50/1 Could probably do with rain as he loves the mud. Looks sure to stay, but likely to meet something with a touch more class.	 27 LORD WINDERMERE 50/1 His comeback run this season might have been promising, but beaten out of sight in his last two races.	 28 SAINT ARE 40/1 Loves it at Aintree and was second behind Many Clouds two years ago. Went well for a long way in 2016, but needs it to stay dry.
 29 VICENTE 25/1 Last year's Scottish National winner should have conditions to suit. Good stamina and a safe jumper.	 30 JUST A PAR 33/1 Never sighted last year, but bounced back to go very close in his repeat bid for the bet365 Gold Cup.	 31 MEASURE OF MY DREAMS 40/1 Pulled up and tailed off in two runs this season, and hardly smacks of a National winner-in-waiting.	 32 RAZ DE MAREE 28/1 A popular stayer who has taken his form to greater heights this season. The 12-year-old finished second in the Welsh National.
 33 STELLAR NOTION 50/1 Placed in big handicaps on his last four starts, but hard to make a case, he has been crying out for this trip.	 34 PENDRA 50/1 Nailed in the final strides of the Kim Muir at Cheltenham on his first run back this term. Talented, but rarely puts it together.	 35 ROGUE ANGEL 25/1 Irish Grand National winner in 2016, he looks sure to run a big race. From the same connections as last year's winner.	 36 COCKTAILS AT DAWN 80/1 Failed to complete in three of his four outings to date this term and the one he did finish he was beaten 78 lengths. Look elsewhere.
 37 THUNDER AND ROSES 25/1 Won the Irish National two years ago but has not got his head in front since. His last three runs suggest he could be back to his best.	 38 GAS LINE BOY 80/1 Hit hard by the handicapper for winning a nice race at Kelso and beaten a long way at Haydock. A long shot.	 39 GOOD TO KNOW 66/1 Certainly won't be found wanting on the stamina front, but likely to complete in his own time.	 40 LA VATICANE 100/1 A winner at Doncaster over three miles in December, but that's a long way from what is required. Pulled up at Cheltenham last month.
 41 DOCTOR HARPER 66/1 Finished with a late rattle at Cheltenham on New Year's Day but has disappointed twice since then. Unlikely to suit National.	 42 BLESS THE WINGS 50/1 Now 12, but showed he was no back-number when chasing home Cause of Causes at Cheltenham. Could sneak a place.	 43 KNOCK HOUSE 66/1 Trained by Donald McCain, son of legendary Red Rum trainer, Ginger, he could be given a chance on his best form.	 44 SAMBREMONT 66/1 Form has been uninspiring this season and has done all of his winning on heavy ground. Others preferred.

* ALL INFORMATION CORRECT AT TIME OF GOING TO PRES

It's that time of year again. Saturday sees the world's greatest steeplechase, the Grand National, take place at Aintree.

A national institution, it is the day when everyone, whether or not they know anything about racing, has a flutter in the hope their horse will be first past the post.

Last year's winner, Rule The World, became the first novice to win the race since 1958.

To help you get involved we have put together this easy-to-use sweep-stake kit.

Opposite are the names of the 40 top horses, plus four reserves should any of the top 40 pull out, along with a guide to each horse's form and the best odds (at the time of writing). Not that it matters too much when you are picking your runner blindly out of a bag...

We suggest charging £2 a ticket, which will give you a kitty of £80. Cut out the names opposite, throw them in a bag or box, get your friends or workmates to draw a ticket and fill in the list below with the details of who has picked what. The winner will take away £40, the second £25, the third £10 and the fourth a fiver.

This year's race is being shown live on ITV for the first time.

Coverage begins on Saturday on ITV from 2pm with the Randox Health Grand National starting at 5.15pm.

I didn't realise it was the biggest show on television, I was petrified

STRICTLY COME DANCING FAVOURITE GIOVANNI PERNICE TELLS MARION McMULLEN WHY HE DREAMS OF SWEEPING A ROYAL OFF HER FEET

Do you have a dream dance partner?

YES, and her name is Elizabeth – Elizabeth II – the queen. I would love to dance with her. I can see her doing the jive wearing the crown. We can be the queen and king of jive. The jive is my favourite dance. It's a bit cheeky and very quick.

Can anyone learn to dance?

ABSOLUTELY. Everyone can learn to dance. People love to dance. It is natural. You just have to put yourself into the music and enjoy.

Did you know much about Strictly Come Dancing before you joined the BBC show?

NOT really. I was living in Italy and moved to London for the show. I didn't realise how popular it was. We have the show in Italy, but there it is a lot smaller. I didn't realise that here it was the biggest show on television. I was petrified. My English was not good when I first started. I couldn't speak English at all and I was not very confident. The only things I could say were 'What's your name?' 'How are you?' and 'Where's the toilet?'

Can you cope now with all the UK's regional accents?

I CAN. I have been touring with the Strictly Live tour for two years and I have been performing all over the country. I listen to people in Birmingham, Newcastle, Liverpool – all the accents. (Laughs) For my next job I can be an interpreter of different accents. I live in London now. I still go home to and see my parents and my sister. I went for 10 days last time, but after five days I wanted to come back to the UK. I really missed it.

What's the oddest story you've heard about yourself?

THERE was a story I was seeing Katie McGlynn from Coronation Street. It was absolutely not true. She is a friend and we were in a restaurant with 15 other people in the same room. It's annoying when the media talk about my life and it is not true. I'm single and happy.

You are starring in your first solo UK tour. How did the show come about?

PAUL Irving, the producer, asked a while ago if I was interested in doing a tour and I said 'yes, absolutely.' I just need to dance. I am going to be appearing with my dancing partner, Luba Mushtuk and another three couples. We've had to learn all the choreography for the show and it's been non-stop. We have been rehearsing every day. I'm trying to do a different type of show with a storyline and lots of dance like Argentine tango, Latin, ballroom and, of course, jive. (Laughs) I have been going to the gym and getting my abs out and doing some weights... just to look good.

Can you explain the title of the tour?

IT's called Il ballo è vita or Dance Is Life just because my life has always been around dance. I went to Bologna in northern Italy when I was 14 to train. The biggest dance academy is there and I went to be the best, to perfect my dance and train with the best teachers.

Are you also offering a personal masterclass to any dance schools booking block seats for the tour?

I LOVE teaching kids and I will be giving a personal masterclass before the show. I always think it is special to work with children and get the next generation interested in dance. I think any age between seven and 10 years old is about right to start classes.

When did your own passion for dance begin?

I WATCHED a show on television called Come Dancing and I remember there was just this chemistry between the boys and the girls. I turned to my father and said 'I want to do that with my life ... and be around girls.' My Dad said 'I love you. Do it.' (Laughs) I was just seven then, imagine now I'm 27. From the beginning my parents really, really wanted me to do dance. My dad is a policeman and my mum looked after me and my sister. I have lots and lots of aunts and uncles as well. It's a real big Sicilian family.

What has been a highlight of your career?

THE highlight was winning the Italian Championships in 2012. It was the first international competition that I was representing my country at world championship level. I have the date I won the competition tattooed on my wrist. I also have 'Nato per vincere on my arm,' which means born to win – I am really competitive – another tattoo saying never give up and tattoos of my mum, dad and sister's names.

Finally, any idea about who will replace Len Goodman as Strictly's head judge?

I REALLY don't know anything about it, but we are going to miss Len so much. He is a legend. Whoever becomes head judge will have a hard job to replace him. I love Len.

■ Go to strictlythetatreco.com for details of the Il ballo è vita (Dance Is Life) tour.

■ WEST End star Elaine Paige says she is seriously considering having a neck lift to maintain her youthful looks.

The 69-year-old, who has appeared in hit musicals like Evita and Cats, says: "I'm tempted as it's all falling down. I'm a bit of a scaredy-cat, so I'm not sure if I'll go through with it, but if I suddenly look 10 years younger you'll know I have."

■ SIR Ian McKellen is to perform an exclusive one man show at the Park Theatre in London for nine performances only from July 3.

He will be reprising some of his renowned performances from Gandalf to Macbeth in the show entitled Shakespeare, Tolkien, Others & You. Go to parktheatre.co.uk for ticket details or call 020 7870 6876.

■ THIS Morning's Phillip Schofield says he would love to go back to the stage when his TV days are done.

The 54-year-old, who has starred in musicals like Dr Dolittle and Joseph And His Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat, says: "If suddenly I was out of favour on telly, and that can happen at any time because TV is not a job for life, then I would love to play in the theatre, do a play somewhere." Meanwhile, the presenter will be singing some of the biggest hits from Joseph in a short tour of The Knights Of Music at the end of April. Go to knightsofmusic.com

THE BRA'S THE STAR

June Kenton is the queen of British lingerie and has measured up everyone from royals to celebrities. MARION McMULLEN looks back at her career

PROVIDING undies fit for a queen is a daunting prospect and June Kenton admits she was terrified when she was first summoned to Buckingham Palace in 1982.

"Everyone is nervous when they meet the Queen. You worry about what to wear, whether your hair is right... whether you can curtsy without falling over. And that is when you are meeting the Queen in public. I was going to meet her in her bedroom."

June's husband Harold drove her to Buckingham Palace and she says she was a gibbering wreck before the fitting.

Luckily everything went smoothly and the meeting saw June royally-appointed as the corsetiere to Queen Elizabeth.

June reveals in her new autobiography Storm In A D Cup that she was in a complete dream after the first meeting and says: "I, June Kenton, a little Jewish woman from Croydon, had met the Queen and was walking through Buckingham Palace."

The petite powerhouse has been in the lingerie industry for more than 60 years, and came up with her own method for bra-fitting. She discarded her tape measure and used only her eyes for sizings.

Comedy star Dawn French once said: "Thanks to June Kenton I have remained upright, with both front lumps safely encased for all of my adult life thus far. Phew."

June transformed London's famous Rigby & Peller into a leading international brand. She came from a family of retailers and studied at the Berlei Corset School in Oxford Street when she was starting out.

Her own empire began with her running two open-fronted shopping units in Brixton with her future husband Harold back in 1961. They built up the business over the years and made Contour - their company name - a success before they bought bespoke corsetry company Rigby & Peller in Mayfair in 1982.

The business was struggling at the time, but it had a Royal Warrant and had provided a service to the Queen for 22 years.

It was the last made-to-measure corsetry business in the UK and June remembers signing over a cheque for £20,000 and then working hard to build up trade and customers.

Her royal clients included Princess Margaret and the Queen Mother. They were also asked to make monster bras for The Benny Hill Show and The Two Ronnies over the years, but their main focus was on helping women to be fitted with the right bra for their body shape.

June points out: "Most women think twice about spending, say, £75 on a bra, but once you have one on, you immediately feel the difference."

"Someone who understood this right away is the wonderful comedian Jo Brand. Jo first came into Rigby & Peller with Trinny Woodall and Susannah Constantine to film an episode for their hugely successful television series, What Not To Wear. Jo needed help but was not 100% convinced that was possible. A short spell in the fitting room changed all that."

Jo was so thrilled that she came back and bought £2,000 worth of gift vouchers so her friends and family could enjoy the same experience.

June has always been passionate about mastectomy after-care and had to face her own battle with breast cancer in 2007. She says: "I try hard not to dwell on the sad things of the past - or the sad things of today - because I have led a full and rich life."

Meanwhile, the secrets of the Queen's undies are safe with the discrete 81-year-old. June says: "Don't think for a moment I could be tempted to share intimate details of anyone, let alone the Queen of England. I'd rather be sent to the Tower."

IT'S 1502 and Niccolo Machiavelli is called to one of the most exciting diplomatic tasks of his career. Sarah Dunant vividly brings alive these encounters, which go on to be major influences on his treatise, The Prince.

However, this historical novel is mainly the tale of the extraordinary Borgia family. Pope Alexander, and his children, Cesare, the cruel but brilliant military commander son and sister Lucrezia. The story takes us through their audacious power grab.

Dunant takes the historical ledger and blends great narrative with the main actors in this period to create an immersive read of Renaissance Italy.

WHAT'S ON TV

Susanna Reid is stepping away from the Good Morning Britain sofa to host a new show about saving money and eating well. She tells JEANANNE CRAIG about the joys of live TV, and boozy nights out with Piers Morgan

PICK OF THE WEEK

SAVE MONEY: GOOD FOOD ITV, 8pm

AS MONDAY mornings go, it's been an eventful one for Susanna Reid. She's just come off air after a particularly heated instalment of Good Morning Britain, where former Ukip leader Nigel Farage and ex-Labour spin doctor Alastair Campbell went head-to-head over Brexit, and even Reid's co-host Piers Morgan – never one to shy away from a verbal sparring match – struggled to get a word in.

"It was like the dinner party from hell, wasn't it?" Susanna says with a laugh, still in her GMB hair and make-up as she settles into a sofa in an office high above London's Southbank, where the show is filmed.

"It's hard enough to get a word in when Piers Morgan is there, let alone when Alastair Campbell and Nigel Farage are almost coming to blows. I did think I was going to have to get the bouncers in!"

The Brexit debate was followed by an interview with former Sex Pistols hellraiser John 'Johnny Rotten' Lydon.

"I would have thought Johnny Rotten would be the one who was out of control; he was like a pussycat compared to them!" Susanna adds.

After more than two decades working in TV, she clearly still relishes the challenges the job presents, and the range of topics covered on Good Morning Britain.

From the window of the room we're in, there's a clear view of Westminster Bridge, where she and Morgan reported from the morning after the recent terrorist attack.

"It was just utterly shocking," says the former BBC Breakfast host, whose mother Sue volunteered at nearby St Thomas' Hospital on the day of the attack.

"And who knows, we haven't yet got to the bottom of why, or what the connections were. But I don't feel less safe than I did the day before. We're incredibly resilient, we've been through 7/7 and all the threats. There's always something, but I'm happy we're all carrying on. My thoughts and sympathies are with the families of those who've been killed."

Susanna's latest project sees her stepping away from breakfast television to host Save Money: Good Food, in which she and chef Matt Tebbutt offer top tips on how to be a smart spender without sacrificing quality or taste at mealtimes. The pair will spend time with different families to show them how to

I'm very private about my family life, but viewers know me

Piers is the absolute king of dealing with them (trolls). That's one of the greatest lessons I've learnt from him transform their boring mid-week meals into something special – for a fraction of the cost.

Susanna Reid and fellow sofa star Piers Morgan

"As a journalist, it's always interesting investigating things which are relevant, especially to our viewers," says Croydon-born Susanna, 46. "We know food prices are already going up and inflation's up, so what better time for us to investigate how that will impact families' budgets?"

Also, these lovely families are all interested in how they can save money and prevent waste, and that's always relevant."

Susanna cooks every day for her three sons with ex-partner Dominic Cotton, and while she tries to cook from scratch where possible, "I will hold my hands up and say fish fingers regularly make an appearance."

"I will definitely use processed food when I need to, and we regularly get takeaway food. I know that's not the most cost-efficient way to spend my money, so I was really interested in how we can save a bit of money here and there."

Having already appeared on Strictly Come Dancing (she made the final with pro partner Kevin Clifton in 2013), Susanna isn't looking to the Save Money programme to show viewers a different side of herself.

"I'm pretty open about who I am on air. I mean, I'm very private about my family life and my private life, but viewers, I think, know me."

"It's probably nice to see me standing up in a kitchen, as opposed to sitting down on a sofa, that's what's different," she adds, smiling. "They've seen me interview the Prime Minister, they've seen me do a paso doble, and now they can see me chopping some onions and investigating big issues like food waste and super-cheap food."

When asked if it was nice to get a break from Piers, Susanna – who at times seems as exasperated with the outspoken host as many of us at home are – is diplomatic.

"We have a good professional relationship. He's notorious for talking a lot, and being controversial, and he's extremely opinionated. He's determined to force opinions out of me, and of course, having been at the BBC for a very long time, I maintain an air and sense of neutrality all the time. But he's got somewhere with getting an opinion out of me on some of the less political subjects."

While she says they're "genuinely friends" and keep in contact outside of work, they aren't ones to pop out for a quick pint together.

"We've been out a couple of times and both times it's got quite messy. So we like to keep those as few and far between as possible," she reveals. "It's go hard or go home, really, with Piers."

One thing Piers (who, as he's so fond of reminding us, has more than five-million Twitter followers) has taught her, is how to handle social media trolls.

"Piers is the absolute king of dealing with them. That's one of the greatest lessons I've learnt from him. If I ever show him my phone and go, 'Look at that,' he'll say, 'Just block them, just ignore them.'"

Whether it's for reining in Piers on GMB, or 'flirting' with male guests such as David Beckham, Susanna regularly makes headlines; most recently after finding herself at the mercy of comedians Vic Reeves and Bob Mortimer during Comic Relief.

The pair left the usually unflappable Susanna unsure where to look, when a kilt-wearing Reeves (playing his comedy alter ego Davey Stott) appeared to flash a fake appendage.

"I don't know what it was; I knew there was something there, I wasn't going to take a detailed look," Susanna says of the skit.

"When you work in television, you know that anything can happen in live TV, and to be quite honest, anything DID happen on Friday night."

FAMILY HEALTH

Top tips on staying active at Easter

GET OUT AND EGG-ERCISE THIS EASTER SAYS RUTH LYNCH

Park playgrounds are an easy way to have some fun

Sport camps are a great way to keep your kids active over Easter

Your local leisure centre should have a child-friendly obstacle course

WITH the Easter holidays looming, finding interesting and wallet-friendly activities for all the family can be a daunting prospect.

A tempting option is to let the kids watch TV or play on their tablets – especially when the weather is bad. While there's nothing wrong with a bit of screen time to flex the brain or relax, given that the average UK child already spends over 17 hours a week in front of a device, having some other options up your sleeve that will help get the kids more active is well worth it.

The good news is there are plenty of ideas that don't have to cost the earth (in many cases they are absolutely free!) which can also help ensure children get their recommended 60 minutes of physical activity a day during the holidays.

With that in mind, here are my top tips for Easter activities that can boost mood, movement and happiness.

1 RE-DISCOVER RUNNING

KIDS are actually natural born runners – it's just a habit they get out of (sadly). As well as helping build stamina and endurance, studies have also shown that running is a real mood booster that can help children feel more carefree. And remember, runs don't just have to happen round tracks or along pavements.

Why not combine the activity with getting back to nature? Woods are a great play to run, walk, climb trees, jump in puddles, explore and build dens. Check out woodlandtrust.org.uk for locations and inspiration.

2 FIND TIME TO CLIMB

ON the subject of our great outdoors, fancy a climb? I'm not talking harnesses and helmets here but rather hitting the hills as a family.

Walking is one of the best forms of exercise – add a slight, moderate or steep incline into the mix (depending on fitness levels) and you not only get to work leg muscles that little bit harder, you also get great views at the top.

Perhaps even add in a short race to the summit to be named king or queen of the hill!

For inspiration, ukhillwalking.com has a useful interactive hill finder to help you locate a hill that suits your family fitness levels.

3 HUNT FOR TREASURE

NOTHING is more fun than going on a treasure hunt. You don't need to hunt for sweets or prizes, hunt for landmarks instead.

If it's raining, hide clues or 'pirate treasure' (foil wrapped wooden blocks) around the house and garden. And, if your children really can't be separated from technology, why not try geocaching with them?

Using a phone's GPS download and the co-ordinates of local geocaches from geocaching.com (there are 70,000 in the UK) you can quickly get hunting.

4 OVERCOME OBSTACLES

HAVE fun designing, setting up and testing an obstacle course in your back garden, park or indoors (if it's raining). You don't need anything special – all you need is basic things like logs, rocks, cushions, and a stopwatch.

Or, if you prefer a ready-made option, many leisure providers are now offering obstacle based activities. It's worth checking out as the many different muscle movements needed to tackle even a short course, together with the mental stimulation involved, means it is a really great activity.

5 PARK THEIR BOREDOM

THESE days, parks have become much more than a place to kick a ball around (not that there is anything wrong with that), they have become real community and activity hubs, so it is worth looking at local noticeboards and on social media groups for activity (often free) listings.

Organised sessions aside, most will also offer facilities ranging from playgrounds to cricket grounds so it's well worth a trip to find out about facilities.

6 SEEK OUT SPORT CAMPS

EXERCISE doesn't always sound fun. But sport can.

While your kids might turn their noses up at the suggestion of getting more active, chances are there's a sport out there that might trigger their interest and imagination so much that when they take part, they just focus on having fun.

What's more, many local leisure providers recognise this and run dedicated sports camps over the holidays – helping kids to perfect their skills on the pitch or perform better in the pool.

Have a look and see what's on offer to help your kids spring into sport this Easter.

MARCH is ovarian cancer month. Although ovarian cancer only accounts for 2% of total cancer cases in the UK, it is one of the most common types of cancer in women.

Because the symptoms of ovarian cancer are similar to digestive tract conditions like irritable bowel syndrome (IBS), it can often be misdiagnosed. Only one third of UK women know what to look out for, so here's what you need to know:

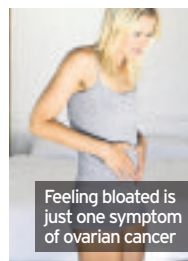

■ What is ovarian cancer?

The ovaries are part of the female reproductive system. They are two small glands that are attached to the womb by the fallopian tubes. The ovaries produce eggs (for reproduction) and make the female sex hormones, progesterone and oestrogen.

Ovarian cancer happens when abnormal cells multiply in the ovaries and grow into a tumour. If the cancer is malignant and is not diagnosed or treated, it may spread into other parts of the body.

Scientists don't know the exact causes of ovarian cancer, but risk factors include:

- Being over 50;
- Being on hormone replacement therapy (HRT) – although this only causes a very small increase in ovarian cancer rates, so the risk is minimal;
- Being overweight;
- Having endometriosis (a condition of the womb), and
- Having a family history of ovarian or breast cancer.

Feeling bloated is just one symptom of ovarian cancer

■ Symptoms

These aren't always easy to recognise as they mirror the symptoms of IBS. But there are additional symptoms that aren't like IBS, which include a constantly swollen, bloated or painful tummy, needing to wee more often than usual, feeling full quickly after eating and discomfort in the pelvic area.

These can be accompanied by sudden or unexplained weight loss, feeling constantly tired, back pain, pain during sex, a change in bowel habits, ongoing indigestion or nausea and vaginal bleeding (especially if this occurs after the menopause).

■ When to see your GP

It may be unlikely that your symptoms are cancer, but it is always worth getting checked out. If diagnosed at the earliest stage of the disease, a woman has a 90% chance of survival – compared with 46% in the later stages. If you've already seen your GP about any of the suspected symptoms and they continue to get worse, go back and explain this to them.

Your GP may feel your tummy, give you an internal examination, refer you for an ultrasound scan, order a blood test or refer you to a gynaecologist for further tests.

SOUND OUT

HIT Nineties pop group Steps are playing a game. Lisa Scott-Lee and Claire Richards are trying to work out who the Chancellor of the Exchequer was when they formed, almost 20 years ago, in May 1997.

As they confer, a giggling Ian 'H' Watkins, sitting behind the pair, slyly tickles their backs. Swatting him away, Claire correctly answers "Gordon Brown" to the delight of her bandmates.

It's just one sign of the affinity and energy retained by the group, who split acrimoniously at the turn of the Millennium.

Since then, of course, things have been patched up, and the band reformed in 2011 for a Sky Living series and a string of concerts. Now, more than five years on, with the exception of 39-year-old Claire, they have all celebrated their 40th birthdays, but that doesn't seem to have slowed them down.

Hauling suitcases and carrying takeaway bags, they bundle into the studio where they're set to have a photo shoot. The five, completed by Lee Latchford-Evans and Faye Tozer, start swapping make-up and hairbrushes, giggling and breaking into song before finally taking their seats.

I catch up with them 24 hours later, after the release of Scared Of The Dark, the lead track from their first album proper in 17 years (they released a Christmas record of largely covers in 2012), and the fivesome have somehow grown even more excitable.

Taking over the corner of a restaurant in a London hotel, their manager, Adam, looking at his laptop, exclaims, "We're on Vice". The comment is greeted with startled yelps – along with an inquisitive query: "Is that good?!"

The Vice declares Scared Of The Dark a "bombastic, ABBA-referencing pop beast that will soundtrack someone's post-divorce drinking this year", declaring it "banger of the month".

This reaction has come as a complete surprise, says Lee, flanked by mum-of-two Richards, who arrives a little later than her band mates after completing the school run.

"We didn't know how people were going to take it," confesses Lee. "We know fans love the old stuff. But the new material, we thought, 'Oh God, we're from 20 years ago, the charts have changed, how they buy it has changed, how it charts...'"

Although they still aren't quite sure how the charts work (they repeatedly ask about the difference between streaming

Retracing their

It's been 20 years since Steps first hit the charts. Now they're back with a new album and a song penned by ABBA's Benny and Bjorn. JOE NERSSESSIAN finds it's a case of déjà vu for the fab five and buying), they take great delight in following Scared Of The Dark's climb on the iTunes Store, and admit they've been sharing updates via WhatsApp.

They listened to the song's first play on the radio in the car together – almost 20 years to the day after they gathered to hear their debut release, the now iconic 5, 6, 7, 8.

"It felt like we had started all over again," reflects H. "There were tears, and shivers and camaraderie and love, and it was so amazing. We were together for 5, 6, 7, 8 listening in a van. It feels like déjà vu."

"New music is the key for us to have a new energy with Steps," says Faye, "we couldn't have asked the fans to come and see us again with just the old songs."

They promise new album, Tears On The Dancefloor, which includes song Story of a Heart written by ABBA's Benny Andersson and Bjorn Ulvaeus, will add some colour and light relief to a "grey world".

"I think the world needs a bit of light-hearted fun," says Lee, "Steps always brought that."

The album was two years in the making.

"We are really protective of us," explains Claire. "Protective of Steps. It is ours, it is our legacy and we're always very cautious about doing something that might damage that."

It's clear the group really want this comeback to succeed.

"Do you not think though that music, and fashion, have a 20-year cycle," Faye reasons.

After a pause, an unsure H asks: "Does that mean we'll do this again when we're 60?"

"Oh God, that scares me!" Faye replies – but don't bet against it.

TAKE THAT - WONDERLAND

"WE ARE giants, I can't believe it," sing Gary Barlow, Howard Donald and Mark Owen on Giants, the lead single of their eighth album Wonderland. And they are right – more than 25 years since Take That hit the UK charts with It Only Takes A Minute, there is no other British boyband-turned-man band who have hit their heady heights and are still going strong.

For Wonderland, their second record as a trio, they have created a kaleidoscope of music that will satisfy fans old and new.

The title track, Lucky Stars and Superstar (with Mark taking lead vocals), see them serving up slices of electro pop, while Giants, Every Revolution (with Howard in the forefront) and River (also led by Mark), are jaunty pop tunes, before ballads It's All For You and Hope leave a lingering sweet taste. There is nobody else like Take That, and they are making sure it stays that way.

AIMEE MANN - MENTAL ILLNESS

AMERICAN Aimee Mann remains one of the most talented and enduring singer-songwriters around.

The quality of her music has never wavered and Mental Illness is yet another outstanding addition. The album opens with the lilting yet strangely named Goose Snow Cone, but it is on the heartbreaking You Never Loved Me, that her wonderful vocals and brilliant songwriting really shine through. This is an almost flawless album, with Rollercoasters and Good For Me equally captivating. In short, it's a triumph.

JAMIROQUAI - AUTOMATON

JAMIROQUAI frontman Jay Kay, now 47, is back with this extremely welcome new album, the first since 2010's somewhat underwhelming Rock Dust Light Star. Fears he may have lost his mojo prove unfounded as this is his finest work in years. The songs are big and bold with the title track setting the template. Dance beats dominate throughout with Shake It On, Superfresh and We Can Do It proving conclusively he is back with a bang. Great stuff.

GOLDFRAPP - SILVER EYE

GOLDFRAPP – singer and synth player Alison Goldfrapp and fellow synthier Will Gregory – have been responsible for some seriously genre-defying, stand-out records: Black Cherry and Felt Mountain, to name but two.

Silver Eye doesn't quite reach the heights attained by those records, but does mark something of a return to form following Tales Of Us, the duo's last, lacklustre offering. Goldfrapp have not exactly repainted their house, but Silver Eye makes for a compelling mood board.

BEAUTY COUNTER

Strobe your way into spring

NEWSFLASH: STROBING IS NOT JUST FOR FACES. LISA HAYNES REVEALS HOW TO HIGHLIGHT FROM TOP-TO-TOE

STROBING is the beauty technique you probably didn't know you needed.

Still not fully au fait with what it means? It might sound like something out of a Star Wars movie, and strobing, you could say, is a bit like having a magic lightsaber in your beauty kit.

It's basically highlighting trickery – think of it as the more subtle, flattering sister of contouring – and though the trend started with faces, it's now transcended to hair, body, and even finger-nails.

Because strobing is all about achieving that elusive lit-from-within look, it's the perfect trend to master for spring. Time to get glowing...

HAIR HIGHLIGHTERS

GOODBYE balayage and babylights, hair strobing is the hottest new brightening technique for tresses.

"The idea of strobing is to accent hair with subtle strobes of colour to illuminate the face," explains Georgie Mathers, Toni&Guy technical artistic director. "In the right places, it can diminish areas of width or widen a narrow face shape."

You can now strobe your strands at home too, using quick-fixes like spray-on highlighting toners or brush-on 'hairshadow' (like eyeshadow for hair). Find them in typical hair tone shades, or more daring statement colours.

"Limit the placement to a few key areas you wish to highlight," Georgie advises. "You can use the colour accents in so many ways – to add depth, create a root ombre effect, a colour top-up, or even disguising greys."

■ STROBING KIT: label.m Highlighting Toner, available in Blonde, Brunette, Red or Blue, £10.95 each (labelm.com/uk); Batiste Root Concealer, available in five shades, £12.99 each (boots.com); Bleach London Balayage Hair Kit Beach Lights, £7 (boots.com)

BODY BRIGHTENERS

LIMB-baring season is approaching, and body strobing is the ultimate shortcut for honed and toned limbs. Michelle Obama arms, anyone?

"Highlighting the areas of the body where light naturally reflects gives an instant sculpted effect," says James Harknett, tanning guru and Fake Bake ambassador. "The easiest parts of the body to strobe for spring are the shoulders, arms and shins – just always focus on areas the sun would hit and naturally tan."

James recommends using self-tan 24 hours before strobing, to up the contrast of your finish. Don't limit yourself to body specific products – some of the best strobing sticks and palettes are designed for the face but work just as well gleamed onto shins and shoulders.

MANI ILLUMINATORS

SURE, it's subtle – but nail strobing is still a thing. Pearlised, sheeny manis were on repeat backstage for SS17, to top off all that healthy-looking strobed hair and skin.

"Highlighting, or nail strobing, gives you a dewy, shimmery, healthy finish to the nails," says Jenni Draper, nail expert and OPI brand ambassador, who adds that even lengthened talons can be yours, with some clever strobing trickery: "Using an iridescent polish will create highlights down the length of the nail, giving the illusion of longer nails."

For low-key nail strobing, she recommends sticking to champagne tones for fair skin, golden tones for olive skin, and terracotta tones for darker skin. If you want to up the nail ante, make an impact with high-shine holographic or chrome finishes.

COLLEGE dropouts Steve Jobs and Steve Wozniak founded Apple Computers, Inc. They started out building the Apple 1 in the garage of Jobs' parents house in Cupertino, California, and sold them without a monitor, keyboard or casing at first. By 1980 sales totalled $117m and Apple went public in December that year, instantly creating more millionaires than any company in history.

A RARE German coding machine from the Second World War was stolen from the Bletchley Park Museum in Buckinghamshire. The thief carried out the cipher machine, worth more than £100,000, when the museum was open to the public. The theft came a week before a new security system was to be installed in the building. The missing machine was sent in the post to TV presenter Jeremy Paxman several months later.

Samsung says it is confident that the Galaxy S8, left, won't suffer the same problems as the Galaxy Note7 did

Samsung smartens up with the S8

LET'S get this out of the way right at the start - Samsung says it has used the Galaxy Note7 debacle as a learning experience, updated its quality control systems, and is confident the Galaxy S8 smartphone will not suffer the terminal issues its big brother suffered last year. In short, this phone won't explode.

Which is just as well, because there is a lot riding on the S8 - Samsung's latest smartphone, and one which brings a couple of interesting innovations to market.

The S8 features a different-shaped screen, for a start, which doesn't have the 16:9 aspect ratio most smartphones sport these days. The S8 screen is longer and narrower than the S7. It's a smaller phone, with a bigger display.

It achieves this with a screen that goes to the device's edges on either side, and it does away with physical buttons on the front of the device.

The home button appears on screen when needed, but gives vibration feedback when pressed. Samsung takes advantage of the new-sized screen to offer the chance to run a couple of apps at once, and says it's better for watching video.

The phone runs Android, of course, but also brings another software innovation - a brand new virtual AI assistant. A brother for Siri, Alexa, and Cortana.

And it's called Bixby.

It's a bit too early to say just how Bixby will stack up against its competitors, but it does claim to do something its rivals don't - search using images. Siri can't do that at all, and the Google assistant can be bit hit and miss. Samsung says Bixby will lead the way.

One thing Bixby doesn't do yet is integrate the intriguing 'learning' artificial intelligence of Viv, the company that was started by the creators of Siri after they left Apple's employment, and which Samsung acquired last year after an impressive demo of the new tech it had developed.

That will be incorporated into Bixby soon, and Samsung says the version of the software it showed off at the S8's launch event in New York this week isn't finished and will be considerably more polished when the phone is released on April 21.

Other new things in the S8 include a better front-facing camera, a new iris scanner that can be used instead of the fingerprint scanner on the rear of the device, and a new Samsung Connect app that can be used to control compatible domestic appliances. It's also waterproof.

The rear camera is still able to capture images at 12MP, but Samsung says it has tweaked the software to produce images with more detail.

One of the most interesting things Samsung showed at the event was an accessory to the phone - a dock that allows you to connect it to an external screen and keyboard, so you can use it like a mini-PC.

The upgraded processor in the S8 is certainly capable of powering such a set-up, but the jury must still be out on whether the software is up to the job - scaling smartphone software up to desktop-sized screens has not been a success so far.

The S8 is a good-looking phone, which brings some genuine innovations to the table, and should, barring any Note7-style mishaps, restore Samsung's reputation as the maker of one of the best smartphones out there.

The Samsung Galaxy S8 can be ordered now for delivery on April 21, and will cost £690 for the 5.8in screen standard version, and £780 for the larger Plus model, which sports a 6.2in screen.

SQUARE COMES TO THE UK

RUNNING one global company would be more than enough for most people. But Jack Dorsey, co-founder and CEO of Twitter, is, as they say, not most people.

He combines his role running Twitter with being CEO of Square, a company he also founded.

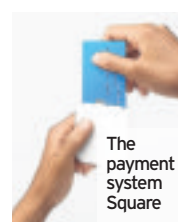

Square is a card payment processing system, and, some eight years after it launched in the US, it's coming over here. It already operates in Japan and Australia.

It's essentially aimed at small traders who need to take card payments face-to-face, but don't want to get involved with the complexity the big players in the market bring.

Square users buy a simple £39 card reader that syncs with a smartphone app, and pay a 1.7% fee on each transaction.

Dorsey was over in the UK this week for the launch, and showed no signs of stress given his dual role.

Let's hope launching Square doesn't distract him from the job of pushing Twitter ever forwards.

GOOGLE HOME GETS ITS UK LAUNCH DATE

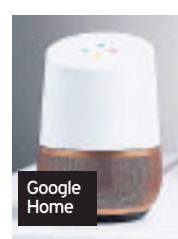

WE'VE had quite the wait, but we finally know that Google Home will be available in the UK next week - on Thursday, to be precise.

The device is a high-quality speaker which brings Google's artificial intelligence assistance into the living room. It can play music, control devices in your home, read you the news, and lots more, and you control it by talking to it. Google says its continuing to work hard to bring more apps to Home.

It'll cost £129 and will be available from the Google Store online, as well as from Argos, Currys and PC World.

Google is introducing its WiFi product at the same time - it's not an internet service provider, but a replacement for your router that promises more reliable connections across your home, and a smart, simple app to help you control which devices are connected to the web, and when.

Google WiFi will cost £129 for a single device, and £229 for a two-pack to give wider coverage.

APP OF THE WEEK

WAKEMODE
(iOS AND ANDROID)

I'M a little bemused by sleep tracking apps - I've always thought of those small hours as harbouring no mystery. I'm asleep, that's it.

Now, I'm lucky to be able to sleep anywhere and at any time, but I do realise that some people struggle with getting enough nod. And I also know that tracking sleeping patterns can help us understand what's going wrong, and crucially, why.

WakeMode is such an app, but it brings another dimension to the conversation - it claims to be able to track fatigue. And it illustrates this using a battery icon that shows you just how tired you are.

The app monitors your sleep and is able to give you an up-to-date measure of just how run down you are throughout your day.

You can top up your energy levels with a coffee, or even a little nap - and manually update your status on the app. Even if it seems like a bit of a gimmick, the simplified interface offers insights that will help you adjust your sleep patterns.

Just some of the Gerald Scarfe drawings going on sale

TALENTED CARTOONISTS WHO PROVED THAT THE PEN IS MIGHTIER THEN THE SWORD

MAN has been ridiculing his fellow men in art ever since the cave drawings of prehistoric times. Illuminated manuscripts of the 15th and 16th centuries were often irreverent and merciless to some of the people that featured in them, while painting throughout the ages has always had a comic element.

However, the cruel caricatures drawn by James Gillray, the father of the political cartoon, broke new ground. The master of sarcasm and wit, his targets were mainly the royal family, politicians and members of society.

Sound familiar? Gerald Scarfe, of Private Eye and Pink Floyd's "The Wall" fame, is the foremost and most admired caricaturist and cartoonist of our age. He continued the tradition, producing the provocative – some would say grotesque – original drawings, illustrated here. They come from his private collection and 130 of them, some unpublished and never seen before, are about to go to auction.

James Gillray (1757-1815) began as an engraver of letterheads and, like Scarfe, was largely self-trained, despite studying briefly at the Royal Academy School. He shot to popularity after the 1786 publishing of "A New Way to Pay the National Debt", a satire on the royal family. It made his name. It shows George III and Queen Charlotte, with Prime Minister William Pitt handing the couple a bag of money inscribed £100,000 from a barrow he has just wheeled out of the Treasury.

Gillray was scurrilous, coarse, biting, sometimes grotesque but always witty in his cartoons. He set the tone for English graphic satire and became its greatest influence.

His cartoons were turned out in huge quantities as hand-coloured etchings to be sold for a few coppers.

New cartoons appeared at very short notice in response to the story or political scandal of the moment. One contemporary writer put it aptly: "They fight to be first in Ackerman's (print) shop to see Gillray's latest caricatures. The enthusiasm is indescribable; when the next drawing appears, it is a veritable madness".

The imaginary target, John Bull, was a particular favourite.

One of his most famous cartoons, exulting Nelson's victory, "John Bull taking a luncheon: – or – British cooks, cramming old grumble-gizzard, with bonne-chère" shows admirals serving up French ships to John Bull seated at the dining table.

In toon with modern life

Above, Gerald Scarfe's 'Churchill in the House of Commons', a charcoal drawing estimated at £100,000-£150,000 and, right, James Gillray's 'John Bull taking a luncheon: – or – British cooks, cramming old grumble-gizzard, with bonne-chère'

It was published in 1798

Fame did him no good, though. Gillray's eyesight began to fail and, unable to maintain his high standards of work, he grew depressed and started drinking. He also attempted to kill himself by throwing himself out of a window, after which he was struck by insanity.

He can also claim extra posthumous fame: in a cartoon published in 1797, titled "Political Ravishment, or the Old Lady of Threadneedle Street in Danger!" the artist also coined the euphemism for the Bank of England still used today.

Sadly, today's collectors have little chance of finding an original affordable Gillray drawing. Most of his work was drawn directly on to engraving plates, cutting out the etching stage. Gillray signatures should also be treated with caution, they were often added to early 19th century cartoons.

Would-be collectors of Gerald Scarfe's work have no such problems. The sale of some 130 drawings is at Sotheby's in London on April 5, but while others are more affordable, the star lot is expected to fetch £100,000-£150,000.

The historic drawing of Winston Churchill shows the elderly statesman's final appearance in the House of Commons in 1964. Scarfe had been commissioned by The House of Commons.

Gerald Scarfe was born in London in 1936. After a brief period at the St Martin's School of Art in London, he established himself as a satirical cartoonist during the early Sixties, working for Punch and Private Eye magazines.

Perhaps his best known work was designing and directing the animation for Pink Floyd's "The Wall". He was also production designer for Walt Disney's animation, "Hercules" and has been political cartoonist for The Sunday Times for 50 years and The New Yorker for 15 years.

Scarfe said: I have drawn, ever since I could hold a pencil. As a child I was a chronic asthmatic and spent long periods bedridden. Drawing became my way of communicating, my way of exorcising my fears, and that still applies today.

"My drawings are of course very personal acts made in the privacy of my own home, but when they leave my hands they escape into hundreds of thousands of copies and may be seen by millions of people.

"I don't think about that when I make the drawing – it's just between my imagination and that piece of paper – but if a drawing is particularly ferocious or overtly sexual and someone looks at it in my presence I have to admit to sometimes feeling shy; I feel so personally about it. It's almost like undressing in public. To me these are not only drawings, they are memories, and mark particular moments in my life.

"I feel it's the duty of an artist to re-interpret the world and to freshen our stale vision, making us see what we hadn't realised was there.

"What I'm trying to do is simply to bring out their essential characteristics. I find a particular delight in taking the caricature as far as I can."

Less than flattering portraits of the Queen, Prince Charles, the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge, David Beckham and Mick Jagger are accompanied by more than 70 political caricatures in the sale, featuring Tony Blair, Margaret Thatcher, George Bush, Jeremy Corbyn, Theresa May, Boris Johnson, Nigel Farage et al.

■ The collection is on free public view at Sotheby's, 34-35 New Bond Street, London W1 from Saturday-Tuesday, April 1-4.

YOUR GARDEN

With Diarmuid Gavin

MAGNOLIAS LARGE AND SMALL ARE PREPARING TO BURST INTO LIFE WITH THEIR ANNUAL DISPLAY - AND THERE'S A VARIETY FOR MOST GARDENS

THIS time last year my plant of the week on this page was Magnolia "Leonard Messel", a delightful deciduous variety with beautiful and fragrant sugar pink petals.

Then earlier this year a lunch guest, a great old dame with a renowned interest in snooping through her hosts' gardens, brought me this shrub as a gift.

I have been checking every day recently with excitement to see when the furry pink buds will burst into flower.

When a heavy frost is predicted, I put it in a sheltered position. And when it does blossom it will always remind me of my guest and that lovely Sunday lunch.

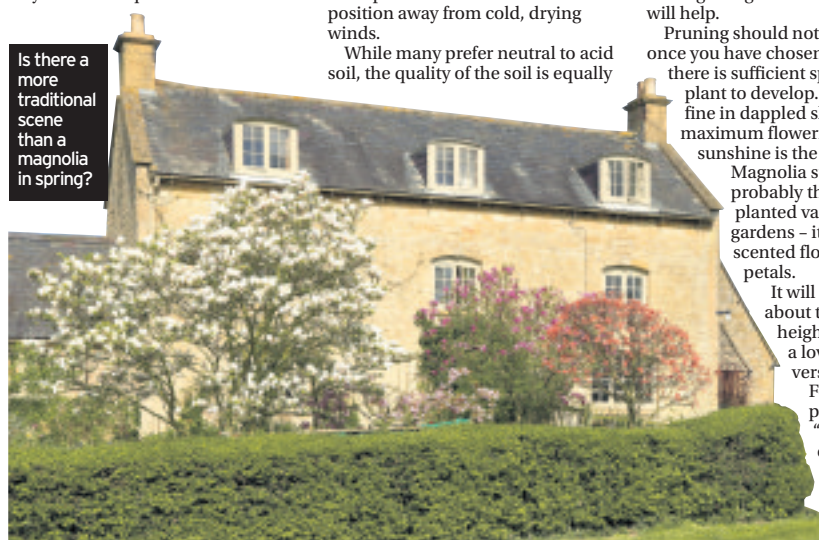

It's a sign that spring is well in its stride when these beautiful trees and shrubs put on their annual floral display.

A mature magnolia in full bloom is a wondrous sight. Some of the most spectacular ones can be far too big for the average garden - for example the champion magnolia tree "Diva" at Westonbirt Arboretum in Tetbury, Glos, has rich pink flowers and reaches 24 metres into the sky.

But there are plenty of varieties, from shrubs to small trees, that will make a beautiful focal point in your garden every spring.

The aforementioned "Leonard Messel" is one such variety with the added benefit that it doesn't mind a clay soil and is quite frost resistant.

Is there a more traditional scene than a magnolia in spring?

That can be a problem with magnolias - a hard frost can damage the buds and they will be blackened.

So it is important to plant in the best spot. This will be in a sheltered position away from cold, drying winds.

While many prefer neutral to acid soil, the quality of the soil is equally important - rich fertile moist soil is best.

You don't want them to dry out in summer. Magnolias are shallow rooting so a good mulch once a year will help.

Pruning should not be necessary once you have chosen wisely and there is sufficient space for the plant to develop. They will do fine in dappled shade but for maximum flowering, full sunshine is the best.

Magnolia stellata is probably the most widely planted variety in smaller gardens - it has pure white scented flowers with long petals.

It will grow slowly to about three metres in height. "Jane Platt" is a lovely pink version of this.

For a deeper pink, M. liliiflora "Nigra" is a deservedly popular choice - dark pink tulip-shaped flowers will delight in June and this will grow to around three metres as well.

Magnolia soulangeana or the saucer magnolias are very popular. One of the more compact varieties is Lennei, reaching about six metres at maturity. Goblet shaped flowers which are purple on the outside and white inside make a stunning bicolor display on bare branches in spring.

Or what about a yellow magnolia? "Sunsation" has really big yellow flowers with a pink blush at the base.

As it flowers a little later in spring it runs less risk from frost damage so it's a good choice for harsher climes.

The other magnolia I have is M. tripetala. This is also known as the umbrella tree which is so called because of its large leaves which are around a foot or more in length.

It's still only a few years old in my garden and yet to flower - but that may be a good thing as the white flowers are amongst the only magnolia flowers which are said to have a bad odour.

But since I am growing it to enjoy the foliage I'm not too concerned!

PLANT OF THE WEEK

OMPHALODES CAPPADOCICA NAVELWORT

ONE of the best spring flowering perennials, it's an easy-care plant and does well in partial shade so long as the soil doesn't dry out too much.

It has lots of bright blue flowers - similar to forget-me-not - above fresh spring green leaves.

It does well under some trees and will spread and self seed to form a blue river winding its way through the border. It provides a useful ground cover that will elbow out weeds and cut down on the garden maintenance. "Starry Eyes" is a popular cultivar with each blue flower having a white edge.

Perfect for keeping borders weed-free

WHAT TO DO THIS WEEK

■ HAVE you got your veg seeds ready for planting out? The soil will be warm enough in many areas next week for direct sowing.

■ GET ready for the Easter season - garden centres are full of flowering bulbs which will look great in pots and containers or bare gaps in the borders.

■ IF you took hardwood cuttings last year, check on them now - they should be ready for potting on or planting in the ground.

■ LIGHTLY clip heathers, right, as flowers turn brown.

■ GIVE acid-loving plants like camellias and rhodos an ericaceous feed.

■ WEEDS are emerging - the more you tackle them now, the less problems you'll have later in the season.

Stuff the Easter eggs and get stuck into these instead

A NEW month looms, bringing with it the promise of warmer days, egg shaped chocolate and a veritable bonanza of games. Expect ridiculous first-person shooter fun with a remastered version of Bulletstorm, magical adventures in Syberia 3 and some surprisingly intense horror with Little Nightmares.

BULLETSTORM: FULL CLIP EDITION

PS4, XBOX ONE, PC Release: April 7
WHEN it first landed in 2011, Bulletstorm was a massive flop.

This futuristic first-person shooter was crass, violent and goofy – with players getting extra points for performing increasingly ludicrous and creative kills.

But it was heavily criticised for a tiresome multiplayer and the last few hours of the campaign getting increasingly 'stale'.

It's these criticisms that developer People Can Fly hopes to have addressed with the Full Clip Edition.

Remastered to support 4K on the PC and PS4 Pro, there's a new Overkill Campaign Mode which starts the players with access to all the game's weapons, and six new Echo maps.

Pre-order to get exclusive access to Duke Nukem's Bulletstorm Tour, where you can play as the eponymous Duke.

DARK SOULS 3: GAME OF THE YEAR EDITION

PS4, XBOX ONE, PC Release: April 21
THE last title in the Souls series gets the Game of the Year treatment.

Impressive character customisation, hauntingly bleak environments, and absolutely hardcore boss battles combine to make it an epic send off.

Dark Souls III is beautifully rounded, the culmination of lessons learned in the development of previous games, with a dose of Bloodborne added to spice up the mix. And while it doesn't feel fresh anymore, there's something extremely comforting and inviting about it.

This Game of the Year Edition features the original game and both DLC expansions – an absolute bargain.

SYBERIA 3

PS4, XBOX ONE, PC, Nintendo Switch Release: April 21
THE Syberia series is an undiscovered gem for adventure game fans.

The games follow the adventures of American lawyer Kate Walker as she travels across Europe and Russia.

From the pen of Belgian comic artist Benoit Sokal, the Syberia games are packed with intriguing characters and beautiful, steampunky and detailed environments.

This third instalment sees Kate helping nomads fulfill their odd ancestral tradition, as they accompany snow ostriches on their seasonal migration.

Thoughtful, laid back and with a strong story that holds the imagination to the very end.

Definitely not one to be ignored.

LITTLE NIGHTMARES

PS4, XBOX ONE, PC Release: April 28
COME face-to-face with your childhood fears in this surprisingly spooky game from developer Tarsier Studios.

Little Nightmare follows the journey of Six, a nine-year-old girl kidnapped from her home and taken to work in The Maw.

This surreal underwater resort caters to the whims of the rich and powerful – and to escape it, Six must venture out on a grim shadow-filled adventure. An intriguing storyline combines with outstanding sound design, and a unique art style to deliver eerie chills and goosebumps.

What does Brexit mean for the UK property market?

WITH Article 50 triggered and the UK's withdrawal from the European Union (EU) now less than two years away, Brexit's likely impact on the property market has been outlined by national estate agents Leaders.

Allison Thompson, managing director at Leaders, puts forward a series of predictions, commenting: "Whether you are a homeowner, tenant, small private landlord or large-scale property investor, the state of the housing market affects us all."

"The good news is, we don't anticipate any major changes to the market as a result of Brexit, but rather a few short-term fluctuations as we head into a period of inevitable uncertainty. The fundamental features of the UK's property market – in particular the strength of demand compared with supply – will remain the same and this will continue to underpin the market in the long term."

Leaders has issued the following predictions:

■ People won't stop moving

The media will always have an impact on the housing market and some negative stories will inevitably put people off the idea of moving this spring and summer. But there will still be plenty of people who want or need to move and Brexit won't stop them. Those who are determined enough to carry on with their plans and overlook short-term concerns will find opportunities to secure a favourable deal that sets them up for long-term gain.

■ House prices will stay strong

As we become less attached to European rules, choices and conventions, the British dream of owning your own property is set to become stronger than ever. High demand and a lack of supply means house prices are sure to continue to rise. Activity is likely to slow in the short term as some people adopt a wait and see approach, but will pick up again just as it did after the initial shock of the EU referendum last June.

■ Legislation will not be drastically amended

The rules and laws governing both the sales and lettings sectors are unlikely to be drastically changed. Most UK and EU regulations are designed to protect consumers and make renting as safe as possible. However, agents are likely to remain self-regulated so sellers, buyers, landlords and tenants will still need to look for an agent that is a member of a professional body which abides by a strict code of conduct.

■ Rents will remain high

A possible reduction in immigration as it becomes more difficult to enter the UK could have an effect on the rental market in certain parts of the country, as most new arrivals choose to rent. However, overall the rental market will remain strong as tenant demand continues to far exceed supply.

■ Foreign investment could stabilise

Some foreign investors will hold off on investing in UK property until the full economic impact of Brexit is known. This will lead to a slight downturn in high-end London transactions.

Allison continues: "For most home movers, landlords and tenants, there will be no significant obstacles as a result of Brexit and the best course of action is to continue with your plans, drawing on the advice and knowledge of a local property expert to guide you. Staying informed and prepared for any short-term hiccups will ensure you are in the best place to benefit from what remains a robust and prosperous UK property market."

Manor house from Vicar of Dibley for sale

There are some houses which seem to have star appeal for film and TV show producers. And Missenden House is one of them.

The eight-bedroom house has starred in many TV series including several episodes of ITV's 1990s TV detective series Midsomer Murders starring John Nettles.

But the property is most famous for its leading role in the Richard Curtis-created sitcom The Vicar of Dibley starring Dawn French as The Reverend Geraldine Granger.

It ran for three series between 1994 and 1998 and is regularly reprised for Comic Relief and Christmas specials, most recently in 2015.

The show is one of the BBC's most lauded successes and featured a host of famous guest appearances including Johnny Depp, Miranda Hart, Sting, Emma Watson and Damian Lewis.

Grade II Missenden House, which was built in 1729 for a prosperous Georgian East India merchant, was Dibley Manor in the show, the home of wealthy local councillor David Horton.

Its current owners have restored and remodelled the house, which had been split into flats during the 1980s, but have kept its original period features.

They are now selling it via Savills Amersham (01494 787 785) for £3.95m and clearly have a penchant for the colour blue. Much of the artwork, furniture, carpets and flower pots within its extensive ornamental gardens, are of that hue.

Highlights of the property include views over the nearby Buckinghamshire countryside, a glass extension at the rear, a gravel driveway, gym, two garages, two kitchens and a children's climbing area.

Hollywood actor's NYC flat Where Rocky Horror Show was born

IF YOU'RE a fan of horror films then high on your classics list will be 1982's Poltergeist about a Californian suburban family whose daughter is abducted by malevolent ghosts.

Among its stars was actress Beatrice Straight, who played one of the parapsychologists brought in to rescue the daughter and expunge the spirits from the property.

Straight would have been instantly recognisable to audiences at the time. Her career had started in 1952 and she had already won an Academy Award in 1976 for Network, and a 1953 Tony Award for one of her many Broadway appearances.

She appeared in 17 films, 11 Broadway productions and 47 TV dramas. Such a prolific career, and her investment banking family, brought her considerable wealth and she owned a large house in New York at 156 East 62nd Street to live in when she and her second husband were working in the city.

Her former address is now for sale at $18.5 million. It's a 7,500 sq ft, six-bedroom townhouse in New York's Upper East Side, one of the most affluent areas of New York, if not the world.

The six-storey property has roof deck, elevator, walk-in wine cellar, gym and a sauna room.

"With its remarkably high ceilings, windows offering soaring views of the city, and even a sitting room with its own bar, this spacious and versatile townhouse is ideal as both a luxurious family home and a space for entertaining and impressing guests," says Jed Garfield of its agent Leslie J Garfield (001 212 371 8200).

THE revival of The Crystal Maze TV show has set the hearts of many 40-somethings racing after it was confirmed earlier this year that Richard Ayoade of The IT Crowd fame will be presenting a new series.

During the 1990s it was one of the most innovative and entertaining games shows during which contestants navigate often vertiginous and sometimes dangerous puzzles within a zoned crystal maze to gain points.

The show was originally presented by Richard O'Brien who became famous for his manic energy and harsh contestant feedback during each show, although he was equally well known for his camp but deadpan deliveries to camera.

Before the TV show, O'Brien was famous for creating 1973's hit musical The Rocky Horror Show. O'Brien wrote the music and lyrics and the show went on to great stage success around the world and was made into a film. Four songs from the show became hits including the most famous, Time Warp.

The Rocky Horror Show was originally going to be called They Came from Denton High, which referred to the area in Surrey where O'Brien lived at the time in a five-bedroom Victorian house.

He now lives in New Zealand with his third wife but O'Brien's former home in Denton is up for sale.

It's a detached country pile featuring a kitchen-diner, two reception rooms, an office and a garage including a gym. But sadly, no maze.

It's for sale at £1.5 million with Hamptons International (01463 905 242).

AN SUV WITH A SMILE

By Maxine Ashford

THE car market is brimming over with SUVs but there seems to be no let-up in demand. Little surprise then that Skoda has just launched its first ever seven-seater into the mix.

Named after an Alaskan bear, the Kodiaq is priced from £21,565 and is available in four trim levels with a choice of automatic or manual gearboxes, petrol or diesel engines, two or four wheel drive and the option of five or seven seats.

In fact, there are 24 different variants available with two more spec levels being added later on – a Scout version with more aggressive styling and a SportLine with lots of black trim.

The Kodiaq is a great looking car with an athletic stance thanks to its wide three dimensional grille, raked headlights, clamshell bonnet and squared-off wheel arches.

It is available in 10 colours, eight of which are metallic.

The trim levels are S, SE, SE L and Edition with seven seats fitted as standard on SE L grade and upwards.

But even the lower entry trim models are packed with kit. For example S grade features LED daytime running lights, 17-inch alloy wheels, manual air-conditioning, a touchscreen infotainment system, DAB digital radio and SmartLink for seamless smartphone connectivity.

However, the S model is only available with a 1.4 TSI 125ps petrol engine.

Step up to SE and you will see the addition of 18-inch alloys, sunset glass, cruise control and rear parking sensors.

These models also benefit from a Bolero touchscreen infotainment system with eight-inch display, dual-zone climate control, rain and light sensors and auto-dimming rear view mirrors. Seven seats are available as an option.

Next in the line-up is SE L complete with seven seats, 19-inch alloys, a powered tailgate, Drive Mode Select, heated front seats and sat nav with Wi-Fi.

Finally, the range-topping Edition adds leather upholstery, metallic paint and chrome roof rails. Technology features include lane assist, high beam assist and blind spot detection.

At launch, the Kodiaq is available with five engines - three TSI petrol units and two TDI diesels. Capacities range from 1.4- to 2.0-litres with output ranges from 125ps to 190ps.

Although it is difficult to predict sales patterns for a new model, Skoda believes the splits will be 55 per cent retail, 60 per cent automatic, 70 to 80 per cent diesel, 65 per cent 4X4 and 80 per cent SE L trim and above.

We tried two models on a lengthy road route that comprised motorways, town centres and fast country lanes and the car certainly lived up to all the hype.

First up was the Kodiaq SE 2.0 TDI 150ps 4X4 with six-speed manual transmission priced at £27,300 (£28,940 with options fitted).

This model could reach from 0-62mph in 9.5 seconds, topped out at 122mph. It can deliver combined fuel economy of 52.3mpg with carbon emissions of 141g/km.

The first thing to mention is how spacious the car is.

Whilst the Kodiaq is only 40mm longer than the Octavia family hatch, it certainly boasts a larger interior than many rival SUVs.

There is easily enough space for three adults in the back (this was the five seat model) and there are generous levels of leg, head and shoulder space. Storage options are plentiful and the boot has a capacity ranging from 720 to 2,065 litres. The seven seater Kodiaq has luggage space ranging from 270, 630 and 2,005 litres depending on the seat configuration.

There is a wealth of on-board technology to explore and the car features all the latest infotainment facilities with full connectivity to multi-media devices.

The controls, dials and read-outs are perfectly placed for ease of use and the driver benefits from excellent all-round visibility thanks to the elevated driving position.

In town centres, the Kodiaq cruised along with ease and the car was deceptively agile for its size. Manoeuvring through narrow and twisting streets posed no problems and parking was simple thanks to sensors and camera.

Out on the faster roads, the Kodiaq also impressed. The road holding was assured and the steering nice and precise.

There is a little wind noise when pushed really hard, but generally the car is well insulated against outside sounds.

Another plus-factor is the instant power at your disposal which helps to make very light work of overtaking at short notice.

Next up was the 1.4 TSI 150ps DSG priced at £30,750 (£31,780 with options). This car can reach 62mph from a standing start in 9.6 seconds, maxes out at 123mph, has combined fuel efficiency of 44.8mpg with CO2 emissions of 143g/km.

Once again the car was a peach to drive. Being the range-topping model, it featured all the bells and whistles imaginable including luxurious leather upholstery, a drive mode selector to switch between normal, eco, sport and individual modes, wireless charging, electric seats, an eight-inch touchscreen and plenty more besides.

This model featured seven seats and it is reassuringly simple to raise or lower the third row. And unlike some rivals there is actually room in the duo of back seats for an adult to travel, albeit only for short journeys.

The petrol model seemed a little quieter than its diesel equivalent and proved slightly sharper when it comes to driving dynamics and performance. The automatic gearbox is beautifully smooth and despite being on huge 19-inch wheels there was very little body roll to speak of.

All in all, both models were a delight to drive.

The car has a truly premium feel to it with lots of soft-touch materials and smart inlays and I can honestly say that the performance levels match the styling.

It features lots of clever touches that have become synonymous with the Skoda name, including umbrellas tucked into the front door panels, an ice scraper hidden in the fuel flap and automatically deployed door protectors.

When you look at the Kodiaq front on, it seems to have a face that smiles right back at you. And after driving the car it would be fair to say Skoda has plenty to smile about too.

Eating the ELEPHANT

A phrase used to describe a way of dealing with something so big, so overwhelming, that it seems impossible to manage.

Like...
learning the terrible truth about a man you loved.

Like...
discovering your child has been abused.

Like...
realising you were living a lie.

*Do you really know the man you married?
The father of your children? I thought I did.
I was wrong...*

Eating the ELEPHANT
A true story of loss, betrayal and abuse

Alice Wells

The shocking true story that every wife and mother should read...

YOUR

ARIES MARCH 21 - APRIL 20
Hiding your emotions will prove impossible this week and you'll start to see what needs to be done to make your life a better place to be. You no longer tolerate those who don't give anything back to your life. You work on finding you again and I know you'll be pleased with the results. Ring now to hear how it's worth doing work for free in the days and weeks ahead.

TAURUS APRIL 21 - MAY 21
Don't be worried and scared about what may happen. Instead, embrace what is happening Taurus. It's the key to you making the most of your life this week. Overseas links prove lucky and if you have the chance to travel for work, even if it means paying out of your own pocket. Ring now to hear how the written word can save you from spending money you'd rather save.

GEMINI MAY 22 - JUNE 21
People you meet over the coming days help you to work out how you can make your life a better place to be. Go slow with facts regarding finances, as there is nothing you want that you cannot have with a little forward planning. Fellow Gemini's link to you doing things you shouldn't this weekend. Ring now so I can help you make your life the best it can be.

CANCER JUNE 22 - JULY 22
Success is written in the stars for your sign and all you have to do is focus. You've spent far too long trying to do what's right for everyone else when you should be doing what's right for you. Aries link to gossip which is not true. News you get from far away gives you reason to make peace with what happened in the past. Ring so I can help you make your life the best it can be.

LEO JULY 23 - AUGUST 23
Giving up your spare time for work can only be a good thing this week, as it allows you to make up for the setbacks you experienced in your career in March. News of someone from far away helps you to make sense of what really went on behind closed doors. Dress your best on Wednesday when you'll be meeting some very influential people. Ring now to reveal your true calling.

VIRGO AUGUST 24 - SEPTEMBER 22
I know you're lacking courage to do what's needed, but you can and will find it if you ask for help. Not even you can do everything on your own Virgo, even though you often try. Emails, texts and all forms of communication help you make more progress this week than you have all year, so keep your eye on the ball. Ring now to hear how to mix business with pleasure.

LIBRA SEPTEMBER 23 - OCTOBER 23
Saturn makes it easy for you to second guess other's moves, which puts you in a prime position to do good deals and to manipulate situations to your advantage. Just remember to play fair though. Others will not forget how you treated them when the time comes for you to ask for favours in the months ahead. Ring now to hear how the Moon blesses reconciliations in love.

SCORPIO OCTOBER 24 - NOVEMBER 21
You're giving off mixed messages and it would be a good idea to try to think before you speak this week or you could end up making promises you are unable to deliver on. New faces with a different accent to yours bring luck and inspiration to your life. You start to think outside the box and exciting new career ideas are born. Ring now so I can tell you about your future.

SAGITTARIUS NOVEMBER 22 - DECEMBER 20
Although you will try to fight the changes which are going to be affecting your life, aspects suggest they will turn out to be a good thing. Try to put some time and effort convincing those you love that the glass is half full and not half empty. Don't believe what you read in texts this weekend. Ring now so I can tell you why it's worth sticking to plans this week.

CAPRICORN DECEMBER 21 - JANUARY 20
I can see that tension is running high in the home, but if everyone would just say what they really want and mean then things would start to take on some sort of shape. Tip toeing around what the real issue is will only lead to more stress and frustration. Use Wednesday as your action day for communicating with those you need to convince. Ring now to make your life the very best it can be.

AQUARIUS JANUARY 21 - FEBRUARY 19
This is a really good week for new relationships and for building firm bases for a happy future. You need to earn back the trust of someone you let down and this week offers you several opportunities to do just this, so pay attention. Bills still outstanding require your communication before Thursday. Ring now so we can make this your most productive month this year.

PISCES FEBRUARY 20 - MARCH 20
Muddled communications could well see you laying the blame at the wrong person's feet. Think before you speak, especially on Tuesday and Thursday, or you could end up with a lot of apologising to do. Contracts and forms you sign this week mark the beginning of a really exciting project. Ring now so I can help you get the most from this very opportune, but demanding week.

Gymnast trio star at Jewel of the South

THREE members of Harlow Gymnastics Club took part in the prestigious Miss Quatro: Jewel of the South event, competing against elite gymnasts from all over England.

Eight-year-old Selene Virga won the fourth place overall rosette in the Grade 6 event after receiving a gold certificate on bars, silver for range and conditioning and vault as well as bronze on beam.

In the Grade 5 event, team-mate Millie Lynch, also aged eight, was presented with a silver certificate for floor and bronze on asymmetric bars.

Amelia Harrington was awarded silver on vault and bronze on range and conditioning, beam and bars.

Head girls' coach and club owner Gordon Mitchell said: "This was a great result for Harlow Gymnastics."

"This is the first time the club has had representatives at this national level competition – the gymnasts gave their all and should be very proud of their achievements."

Harlow close in on the title

HARLOW Rugby Club are one win away from being crowned London Three North East champions after a 32-22 victory over third placed East London on Saturday.

The visitors opened the scoring when, from a rolling maul, prop forward Jack Christy forced his way over for a try. Danny Smith missed the conversion.

Ten minutes later, from another attack, scrum-half Charlie Woodington gathered the ball and went over under the posts, and with Smith adding the extras, Harlow led 12-0.

Then, on a Harlow break, open-side flanker Michael Weston ran in his side's third try with Ross Stalley slotting over the conversion to extend the advantage to 19-0.

In the final minute of the half, the Londoners broke through for a converted try to cut the deficit.

The home side opened the scoring with a penalty in the first minutes of the second half. Smith replied with a penalty to make it 22-10.

With 15 minutes to go Weston added the all important fourth try for Harlow to secure the bonus point and a 27-10 lead.

Danny Fitzgerald then crashed over from a driving maul for another Harlow try, but East London rallied in the closing stages to twice go over the whitewash, with one of the scores converted to make it 32-22 at the final whistle.

Harlow are top of the league, three points ahead of Wanstead and travel to ninth placed King's Lynn this Saturday.

Club gears up for season

HARLOW Cricket Club are looking forward to starting their new season with their state of the art clubhouse and new electronic scoreboard.

The first XI will once again be skipped by Reyman Ahmed, with the bulk of last season's squad, which was just one win away from promotion to the Shepherd Neame Premier League, retained.

The second XI are under the new leadership of Lewis Aldred while the ever-growing Colts section start on April 20.

Medals for vets runners

AT THE Essex 5 Mile Championships at Braintree, two of Harlow Running Club's veteran members won medals.

Jim Bates, 217th in 41min 18sec, and Peter Mills, 303rd in 46:57, won the Vet 70 gold and bronze medals respectively.

Carinne Jay won silver in the Ladies Vet 45 category (92nd, 35:02), and Paulene Galoppi (372nd, 50:33), took the Ladies Vet 65 bronze. First home was Darren Tiley, 59th in 32:12.

Play-offs hope is hit by late strike

Assistant boss Knight rues two points being dropped

HARLOW Town's Ryman Premier play-off hopes were dented as they were held to a 2-2 draw by struggling Burgess Hill, who levelled five minutes from time.

The result left the Hawks in tenth in the table with just four matches remaining – starting with basement boys Grays Athletic this Saturday.

The Hawks could not have got off to a worse possible start against Burgess Hill, conceding in the second minute when a quick free-kick caught the home defence napping, and Tyrell Richardson Brown headed home a cross at the back post.

Harlow levelled just before the break when Ibrahima Sonko's long throw was headed on by Fabion Simms.

Jared Small collected the ball 12 yards out and fired his shot low into the back of the net.

The hosts upped their game in the second half, especially following the introduction of substitutes Junior Dadson and Mario Noto.

After some sustained pressure, Harlow went ahead when Craig Pope bundled the ball home in the 76th minute following a game of pin-ball in the box.

Disappointed

The visitors weren't finished though. With five minutes remaining Lee Harding floated in a corner and Pierre Hazet rose above the Hawks defence to nod home, earning his side a share of the spoils.

Hawks assistant boss Spencer Knight admitted it was a case of two points dropped, and was bitterly disappointed with the result.

"It was the worst possible start for us – we switched off and didn't defend the second ball," he said.

"It's disappointing to go 1-0 down so quickly because you are up against it right away.

"We were poor for the whole of the first half, our ball retention was poor and we couldn't get anything going.

"We were better in the second half, but you can look at this as two points dropped.

"We work on defending set pieces week in, week out and to concede a late goal like that is a tough one to take."

Despite the defeat, Knight says the team will go again in their bid to get in the play-offs, starting with the game against relegated Grays Athletic.

"We will see where the last four games take us," said Knight. "Sometimes teams that are relegated play with a bit of freedom.

"But they have been relegated for a reason – they haven't been good enough through the season.

"They beat us so we've got a point to prove and will be totally focused on winning the game."
